I hope you will treasure those letters, no matter how much you hate me if you ever do please don't rip or throw away the letters because you know that we won't stay mad forever. I want to wish you the best of luck in the summer and in your junior and senior year. I don't know why we're saying this because I'll be hanging around with you. Let's make our Senior year a hell of a good year. Good-luck with the other guys but I know it will always be Mario, and don't forget in the summer and the years to come, we'll always be parting even though we become burnt. Well if I have anything else (whoops) else to say I'll tell you.

To letty, If I cant write you know why. So you have been a good friend to me, so you remember all the good times we had. Sequia, football games, Sundays party in home and other other places you better treasure those places because I will always treasure them. We got so close this year, and boy was it fun. I had a really good time when we went to Disneyland and when we went to Arthur's. I have never forgot on a long time and I not about to. So you know one of the days you will be with the Champ Mario. And I know you will. And just keep on wishing on a star. And believe me, it will come true. Go on.
We and Bobby you are the one that made me go up to him and talk to him and I won't forget that. Whenever you get in a fight with your parents, be sure you come to my house. And whenever you have a problem, be sure to come to me because you know I will try my hardest to help you. I just want to thank you for being my closest friend. Vol. 6 And no finish writing later.

... Goin' for it

I eyed the looming crowd behind me with nervous satisfaction. They were catching up, but I was far ahead. My throat pulsated as the hot, dry wind streamed through the slight opening between my lips. My body was daily tested by running the inevitable mile.

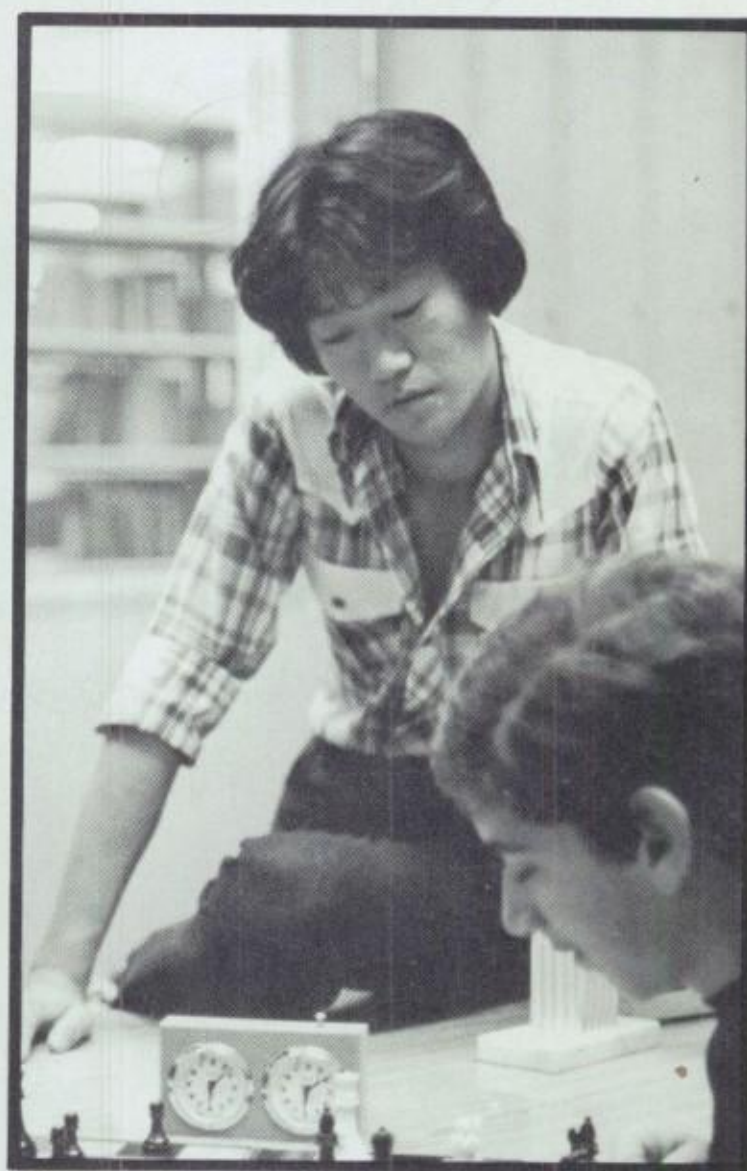

Two more laps to go. The boy — I didn't know him — sidled close to me. He heavily pounded his legs upon the evaporating clay, sending dust into my eyes. When he stumbled and pulled his baggy socks up from his ankles, I congratulated myself for putting on bobby socks this morning. Twisting my exploding head, I spied the crowd fanning out before me. We would soon be engulfed in the stream of sweltering runners.

I threw a sidelong glance at the boy and saw the agony in his burning eyes, the oily sweat upon his nose, and the parched lips as he gasped for air. With each runner who thudded by us my swinging arms swung less and less, while my legs moved like spasmodic pistons. The boy pumped harder and just before leaving me behind, he knowingly smiled, acknowledging the humorous and grueling aspects of trekking the daily mile.

Among my school experiences one type of school event which will not be included in my book of favorite memories is the ever-frustrating fundraiser. Whether it's pushing candy bars for C.S.F., baking brownies for a journalism bake sale, or selling light bulbs for choir, we've all been through the fundraiser syndrome: waking up in the morning, cringing at the thought of having to sell those See's suckers — all 550 of them, by the end of third period in order to go to Disneyland.

I pitched in with luke-warm inspiration and a lot of belly-aching, but the funny part is . . . I never had a boring time fundraising. Along with some sore muscles, dirty dishes, and wrinkled fingers, I suppose I have a lot of fond memories of fundraisers. I've made friends and had good times getting together with people, making money to support a good cause, or going on a trip where more memories were made. Some day when my kids are in high school and come crying to me about selling pizzas or fruitcakes, I'll smile because I'll know that they'll realize, too, that fundraisers are memory-makers.

"Hey you! Freshmen kick!" "No way man, seniors number one!" "You're both wrong, juniors are best!" "You're all crazy! Sophomores rule."

You've probably heard someone scream one of these saying in your ear; then you probably felt some good ol' class spirit and yelled right back, claiming to all, the superiority of your class. Ever since a freshman, you've known that your class is best. But that class spirit turns into fierce pride when your class captures first place in competition. This spirit and pride surfaces several times during the year, most noticeably on Spirit Day, and play a major role in "being in a class."

The biggest part of being in a class is participating, 'cause when you participate, you not only have fun, but you acquire memories the "best years of your life." When you're old and grey, but not quite senile, you will remember how great your class was.

The room is deathly quiet; the only sound is the scratching of pencils. It's test time in period six. There will be seven A's — two of them will be earned through diligent study. Of the other five, two students will have gotten their answers from buddies who've had the class earlier, and two others will be using notes secreted upon their person while the fifth, a real genius, will have his answers craftily sewn into the cuff of his shirt. Unlike drugs, which parents frown upon, cheating is viewed as a shortcut to success by many; it is the "American way of life."

This must happen to every guy. You know, you're walking from first period to the pep rally and out of the corner of your eye you spot a new girl who just about knocks you off your feet. Actually, she's not really new; she's been going to Schurr for the past three years, but you just never noticed her before. Ah yes, you recall now . . . you had her for a class as a freshman, but then she was a little on the . . . you know, homely side. But oh, has she changed!

And now you go into action. You start a friendly conversation and by the end of your little talk you've craftily extracted four important bits of information: name; address; telephone number; whether she's "free game." She is!

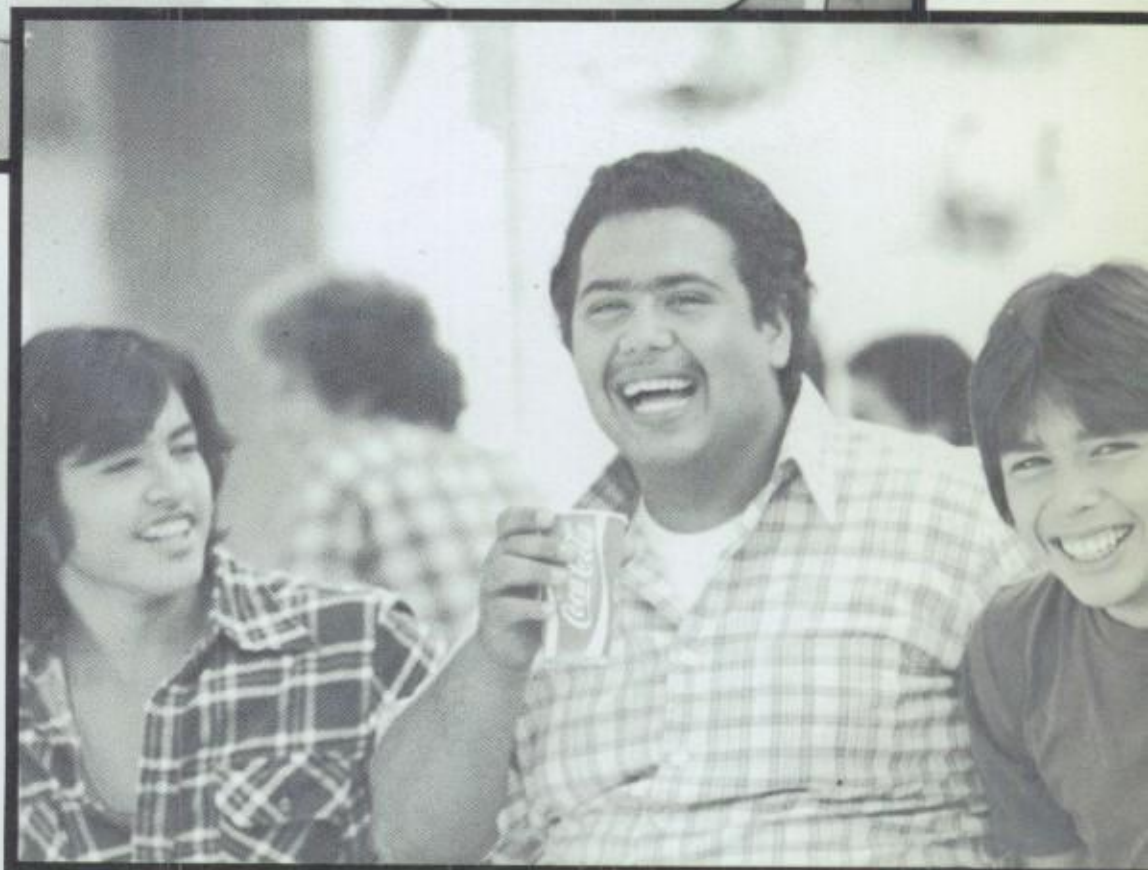

Before long you walk her to every class, eat lunch with her, meet her at parties or concerts. All of a sudden the year's gone by and the prom is looking you straight in the eye. You know she's not only dying to go, but she expects you to take her, so you butter her up and ask her to the prom. Even tho you're told it's going to cost at least $130.00, as long as you're going with her, you don't care.

Now the getting ready! The hour-long shower, the attempt to make your skin its clearest, another half-hour to comb your hair just right, the double check to make sure your tux is in tact. Even tho you've been on dates before, you're still a little nervous. "Do I have the corsage, the invitation, my wallet?" "How do I get there?" One last "booster" look in the mirror and you're off.

You arrive, knock on the door, it slowly opens. You stand there, flabbergasted; you've begun your flight to seventh heaven; the nervous greeting kiss, the drive to the Proud Bird with your arm around her, the reflection of the wonderful times together as you slow dance, your mind completely oblivious to the fact that you're leaving school . . . tomorrow!

. . . Gettin' it all together

The Watcher

You pounded your heart reading cardiovascular development in Mademoiselle. Longed to dirty your legs among the tumble of runners churning themselves into the spewing day.

But the oozing, sweaty sensation circled back the summer
you burnt hot dogs and hamburgers at the stand, and got burnt yourself.

The magazine guides to jogging, not wasting time and organizing one's life
wallow with you in your bed, pebbly with cookie crumbs. You suffocate among the pages, and don't know why.

Again, you slap your dormant legs, and sit back,
like a spectator,
watching the people run by.

I used to dream within my eyes of older days and richer things — when life was easy, like ballroom dancing; when vanilla ice cream sodas with candied cherries were better than frozen yogurt in paper cups. Who can say that I am tense? except for myself? I am as uptight as a pair of new shoes waiting to be worn by Fate. But it's all blind and I'm certainly resigned. Mold me, shake me with vigor and make me cry for richer days and innocence. But I can't fall.

Memories of You

I met him on a brisk cold morning
 In a small french street cafe.
 His kind brown eyes caught my own,
 As if they had something to say.

We talked a while about current things
 And suddenly, the sun began to rise.
 Like a sigh of good news from heaven above
 I would very much surmise.

Years have gone by, since that cherished day
 And our intimate relationship blossomed out
 'til an eternal bridge of love was formed
 Which I would never give a doubt.

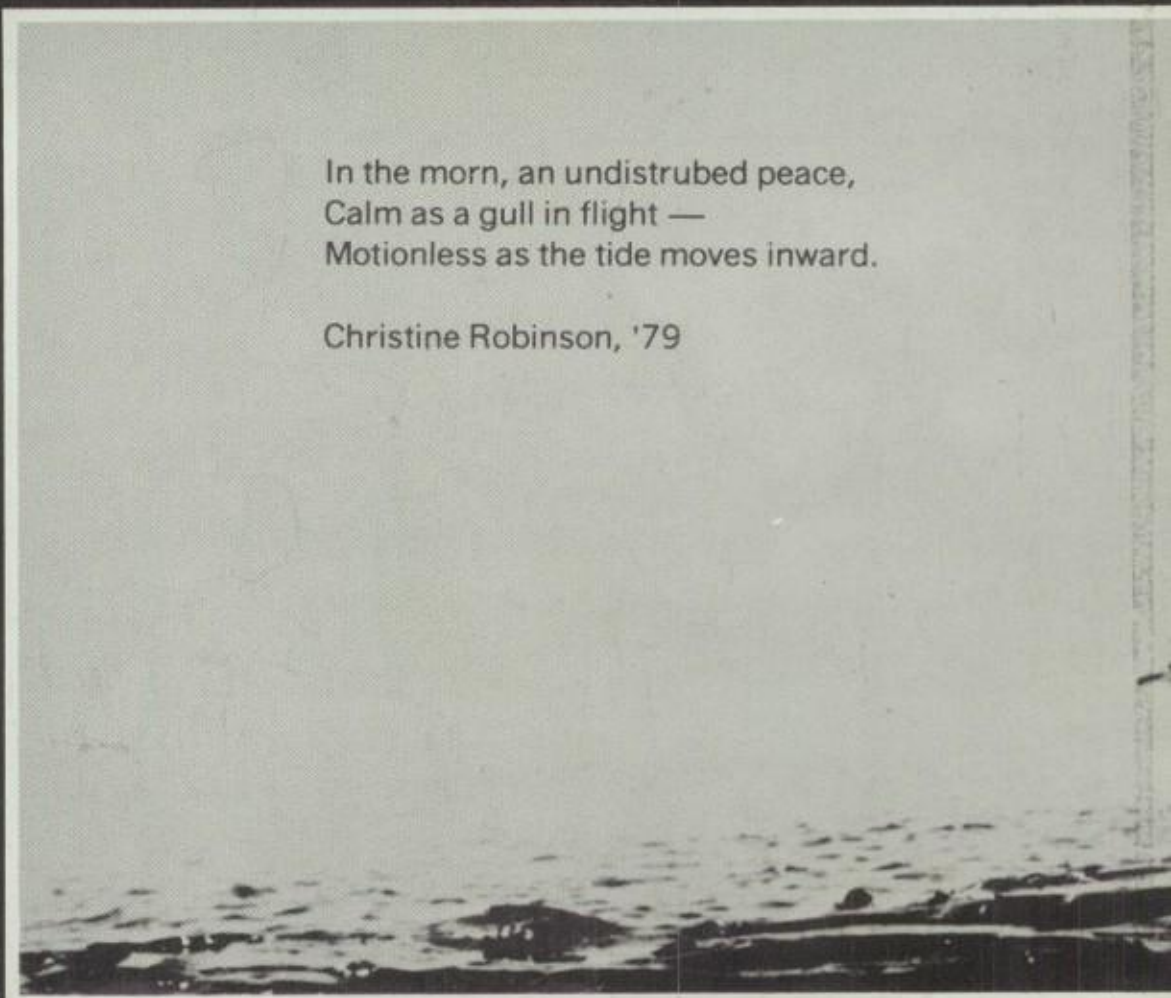

But this is all the past my friend,
 The war has just begun.
 They're taking away my dearest love,
 To a place just south of the sun.

From the station's platform, his train pulls away
 Inching out of my life
 His large rough hand, waves good-bye
 Oh, will I ever see him, some future day?

Spartans Leave M.V.L. Records in Shambles

Awesome is the word that best describes the Spartan Varsity Football squad. Outscoring their opponents 146-6 in league play, the Spartan defense broke the all-time school and league record for the least points allowed. They also set a new record for the longest string of consecutive shut-out quarters, 17 straight.

Many experts agree that football is won or lost in the "pit." Part of the reason for the defensive unit's success was their defensive line. With 19 quarterback sacks to their credit, the front line, consisting of three downlinemen and two defensive ends, intimidated opponents who found out in a hurry that running against the Spartan "D" was like running into a brick wall.

Not to be outdone, the mighty offense, noted for its "big play" potential, averaged better than four touchdowns per game, another "best." Spartan offensive records were also shattered, as Anthony Vasquez fired a spiral to split-end Larry Lowering the boom on Morningside's Q.B., Billy Gonzales (55) and Andy Morales (76) show why the Spartan defense is best.

Third and one deserves special attention from the coaches

Holding fast, the Spartan offensive line provides

Cheech and Chong, alias Rudy Gerardo (33) and Tong Lee (32) teamed up to help make the Spartan offense #1 in the Mission Valley League

Martinez for a 70-yard touchdown bomb against Rosemead. Tong Lee put his name in the Schurr record book by rushing for 803 yards and scoring 11 touchdowns.

As with any great team, the Spartan's greatest strength was that they had no weaknesses, for although they played and terrorized their rivals as a single unit, thirteen of the starters played well enough individually to reserve a spot on the all-league line-up: offensively, Mark Schneider was named first team center, Anthony Vasquez and Roger Lowrey were named for the second team as quarterback and tight-end respectively.

Defensive backs Raul Garcia and Larry Martinez both "picked off" spots on the first defensive team for their superior pass coverage.

Hitting their way into the first team, linebackers Rudy Gerardo and David Rios, and defensive lineman Jim Ferrini proved how well balanced the defense really was.

Scoring 24 points on 21 touchdown conversions and one field goal, Paul Guzman represented Schurr's "special teams" and was chosen second team place kicker.

Showing all-around prowess, Jackie Juarez, Billy Gonzales, and Bob Eckholdt were picked for both offensive and defensive all-league squads. Jackie was first team receiver and second team defensive end; Billy Gonzales, first team offensive guard and second team defensive line; Bob Eckholdt rounded off the list by making first team defensive line and second team offensive guard, Bob became the first sophomore in Schurr's history to make the all-league team both ways.

Last but not least, Tong Lee was selected the Mission Valley League player of the year, and Most Valuable Player of the team, for his outstanding performance on offensive.

RETIRED
 STUD

Agony and ecstasy — sky-high emotions propelled the Spartans as they entered the first round of the playoffs, but their spirits were brought quickly down to earth, as was apparent on Joe Vasquez' face when the Spartans found themselves behind 9-0

Knocked straight up, Jim Ferrini (64) fights into the tough Barstow line

Spartans, coming off their best season statistically, had sky-high hopes as they awaited the first-round C.I.F. Playoff game against the Aztecs of Barstow High School. Being favored by three points in local papers and the fact that the Aztecs had to travel over one hundred miles to get to Heaman Field, created an attitude of confidence within the minds of the gridmen and their fans.

The preparation for victory began during nutrition as Head Coach Ken Davis presented the Mission Valley League Championship trophy to Principal Mr. Walter Wohlheter.

One thing that no one counted on was how tough the Aztecs were, and following a short Spartan punt, the Aztecs marched down to the 22-yard line where the Aztecs nailed a kick that split the uprights for three points.

In the second half, the Spartans were plagued by mental errors and penalties, and when the Aztecs scored on a 32-yard touchdown pass, the Spartan hopes were completely deflated as Barstow led, 9-0.

The crestfallen Spartans, however, showed the class that Schurr High School is noted for as they wished the Aztecs good luck in future playoff games.

Epilog: The Heisman Trophy

Big + Strong +
Fast = Texas'
Earl Campbell

Dodging and "jucking" his way through his final season at the University of Texas, senior runningback Earl Campbell ran his team to within inches of the national championship, and himself to the Heisman Trophy plus some big cash as one of the N.F.L.'s top draft picks.

All the nation's leading rusher and scorer (1744 yards and 144 points) did was help raise the Longhorns to the top spot on both major newswire polls at the end of the regular season. Only a 38-10 Cotton Bowl loss to the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame (the eventual national champs) kept the Longhorns from being number one.

Earl Campbell should be commended for his fine comeback from last season when he was forced to sit out six games. No one expected the thrills and excitement he doled out this season, or the success of his team. (Texas finished with an 11-1 record this year compared to 5-5-1 in '76.)

Of course Campbell can't be credited with all of the Longhorns' good fortune, for Texas was a good team even without their main man. It seems, though, that the Longhorns moved effectively only when Campbell got into gear, which was evident in the Cotton Bowl when the Texas offense sputtered as Campbell was constantly over-loaded with Irish defenders.

Winning the Heisman Trophy has done a lot for Campbell, such as earning him big N.F.L. paychecks. But because of the success of last year's Heisman winner Tony Dorsett (pictured at top right) who gained over 1,000 yards during his halfseason as a starter for Dallas, the big back from Texas U. has some mighty big shoes to fill. But if his '77 performance bears as an example, Mr. Earl Campbell will fit into a larger size.

Campbell became the third consecutive running back to capture the coveted award in the last four seasons. He followed directly after Tony Dorsett of the Pittsburgh Panthers and two-time winner Archie Griffin of the Buckeyes of Ohio State. It seems as though the trophy was made especially for rushers, as more running backs have filled the Heisman roster than any other single position. Earl now joins the company of such greats as O.J. Simpson, Mike Garrett, John Cappelletti, Gary Beban, where he should fit in well.

Following through his forehand return, Ralph Rubio eyes the flight of the ball Remarkable Depth Displayed as Aces Vie for C.I.F.

Making their presence known early in Mission Valley League play, the Varsity Tennis Team awed competitors with three consecutive victories. Combining youth and talent the Spartans were in contention for the league title from the beginning.

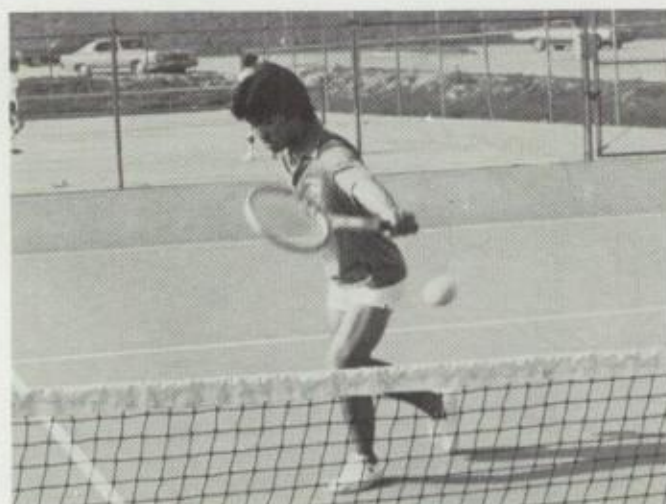

Coach Glenn Sewell led his troops to a mediocre 2-2 pre-season record, but considering that the Spartans were downed by superior teams from Whittier and La Mirada, the netters performance was admirable. On the other hand, Schurr's valiant racketeers massacred Bell Gardens and Sierra by scores of 27-1 and 25-3.

Along with their youth (five out of the eight varsity players will return next year,) the Spartans had more depth than they did last year. These assets should be enough to enable the team to meet their main goal: to finish first or second in the M.V.L. and qualify for the C.I.F. playoffs. The only obstacle in the Spartans' charge toward the league crown is Keppel, but even if the home team doesn't conquer the Aztecs, there's no one else to contend with Schurr for the number two spot.

Heading the varsity talent pool were singles players Clayton Oyama and Alan Toki along with the number one doubles team of Ralph Rubio and Eugene Toy.

Volleying a difficult shot, Ralph Rubio receives some encouragement from Alan Toki

Determination set in his face, Alan Toki powers a backhand over the net

Leaping high to smash a return, Wade Oka maintains concentration on the ball.

Ilie Nastase will be back again! So will Chris Evert, along with Bjorn Borg. These and other pro tennis standouts will be alluring hordes of fans as World Tennis enters its 5th season.

Nastase, whose fiery temper has earned him his infamous nickname, "Nasty," dazzles fans with his aggressive play and comical antics. Ranked 10th in the world, Ilie's ability to hit shots from any angle and his controversial attitude, bring him a large following. Conversely, Evert's coolheadedness and conservative play, evidenced by her deep groundstrokes, is what brings fans to the stands.

Blond-haired, blue-eyed Bjorn Borg returns to W.T.T. this season flaunting his famous two-handed backhand which earned him several titles, including 1977 Wimbledon champion. His Scandanavian good looks often get him into trouble when off the court, however. Once, after winning a match at Wimbledon in 1974, he was attacked by a mob of amorous girls. Since then, Borg has had to resort to desperate measures such as jumping out of his hotel window to escape female fans.

With these exciting and demanding players, World Tennis should attract record-setting crowds. Comics, sex appeal, and good looks will bring out the crowds but talent is what will keep the fans returning, as these three players will help keep World Team Tennis a growing organization.

Varsity Netters Ravage Mission Valley League

Excelling under head coach Glenn Sewell, this year's girls' Varsity Tennis Team marched through a satisfying season. The Spartanettes were greatly aided by the return of four veteran varsity players from last year, including the team's top singles player Linda Zezatti.

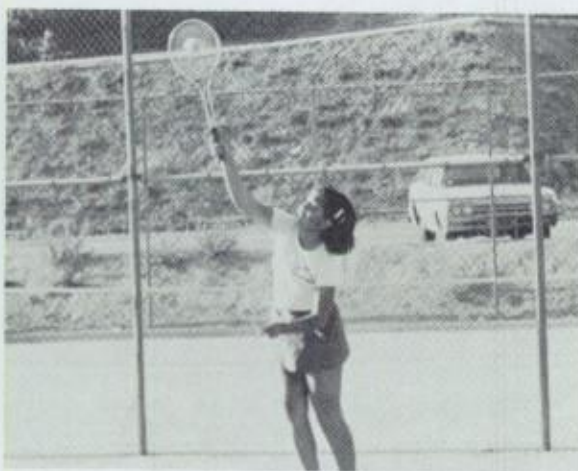

The racketeers barely managed to get through a tough pre-season, finishing with a 4-3 record. But when the league season got underway the players got down to business. After suffering a loss in their opening league matches. That hot streak carried the team to an 8-2 league record — their only two losses came against league champ Rosemead — and a second place finish in the Mission Valley League.

In league finals competition the netters came away undaunted. Linda Zezatti captured the M.V.L.'s number two singles position and was closely followed by Karen Mekata who placed third in singles. Meanwhile, the doubles team of Connie Alaniz and Joanne Marcuson put together a number two league showing.

The netters came through with a sparkling performance in the first round of C.I.F., defeating Tehachapi High School by a score of 15-3. The team's play shines even brighter when considering the adverse weather conditions: temperatures around freezing with 25 mile-per-hour winds. In the second round of C.I.F. action the Spartanettes were less fortunate, losing a nip-and-tuck battle to Atascadero High School, 7-11. The racketeers gave an admirable effort despite the fact the team played without doubles player Marcuson.

Special individual honors were given to the players who showed great skill and super effort. Earning Most Valuable Player was Linda Zezatti; Most Improved went to Joanne Marcuson; and capturing the coveted Coaches' Trophy was Connie Alaniz.

Epilog: The Four Minute Mile

Who's the world's greatest runner? If you're talking about milers, two names pop into mind: Filbert Bayi and John Walker.

Born and raised in Tanzania, Filbert Bayi ran a 3:51 world record mile at Kingston, Jamaica in 1975 and currently holds the world record for 1500 meters.

New Zealander John Walker, number one miler in many minds, has since shattered Bayi's world record for the mile and is the reigning Olympic champ in the 1500 meter race.

Unfortunately for the world, the two great runners have never competed against each other, for the Tanzanian government has banned all competition between Tanzanians and New Zealanders. Stated Bayi, "The decision is justified and we don't feel any pain in obeying . . . we cannot be disappointed."

A sour feeling grows as these two milers continue to be held unnaturally apart. Many do not take Walker's races seriously when Bayi isn't in them.

Walker tries to accept the decision, but stated that "It's to the stage now where it's a joke . . . everyone's asking where he (Bayi) is."

Maybe the world will never know who the top miler is; that is, unless the Tanzanian government relents.

The Best and the Worst of It

For the first time in Schurr's cross country history, an all-girls' team was formed. The fifteen energetic girls who showed up for daily practice proved to have twice as much spirit and enthusiasm as any other girls' team, and showed it by going undefeated the entire season.

Led by Captain Irene Rodriguez, the harriers placed six runners in the top ten in the league finals held at Mt. Sac. Individually, the number one girls' runner, Sue Medina, took fifth place at both the Pacifica and Montebello invitationals; she was also named team M.V.P.

This year's girls' team really earned the right to wear the M.V.L. crown, but the men's team seemed to be overpowered at every meet and ended up at the bottom of the heap with an 0-5 league record.

Showing the poorest season record in Schurr's Cross Country history, no team member could put his finger on the reason his team went from a perennial M.V.L. powerhouse to league cellar position.

Perhaps the only bright spot of the season was top runner and M.V.P. Eddie Lopez' record-breaking three-mile run, clocking sixteen minutes twelve seconds.

Although getting little recognition for her efforts, senior Sandy Simcoe kept careful records of all scores and running times, and was an efficient assistant to Coach Steve Terry.

When analyzing the Varsity Spikers one might doubt that they could lose even one game let alone a match. After all, considering the combined seventeen years of experience among the starting six, their average height of 5'7", and the vicious serves of Debbie Valdovinos and Debi Hashiro, who would even venture to be on the same court with them?

Although physically formidable, the Spartanettes lacked that certain magic and consistency that makes a championship team, often falling victim to last minute rallies by foes.

Although their team performance fell short of expectations, several girls did manage to find a spot on the all-league roster: Nancy Murillo was chosen first team while Debi Hashiro, Stacey Honda, and Becky Baltazar were picked for second team. Epilog: Pro Volleyball

The Dipper Volleys to a New Beat

In the tradition of soccer, tennis, and lacrosse, volleyball has turned pro, but with a co-ed appeal. This popularity led to the creation of the International Volleyball Association last summer by former basketball star, Wilt Chamberlain.

In addition to the slightly larger and heavier ball than that used by college volleyball teams, and the shorter 12-point game, I.V.A. rules dictate that at least two out of the six players must be women and they must be on the court at all times. Unlike amateur volleyball, there is no rotation of the players so the I.V.A. has adopted "designated switchers." These switchers are one man and one woman who can change positions if there is a mismatch at the net.

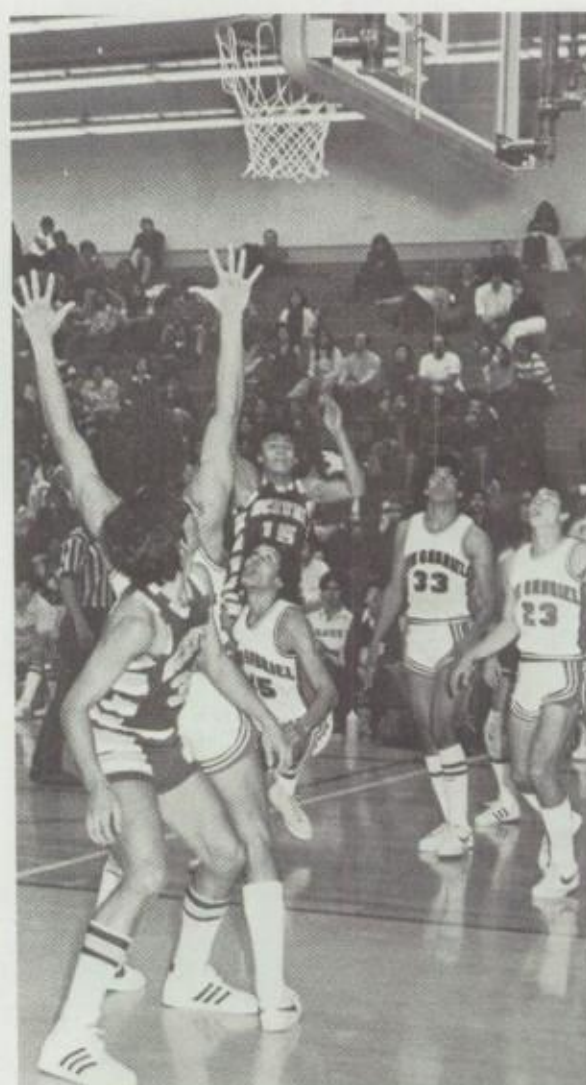

Even though volleyball has turned professional, it's still played in the parks, schools and at the beaches by everybody.

Varsity Cagers Ice a Four-Layered Championship Cake

Enjoying the most productive and satisfying season in the history of Schurr's basketball program, the Varsity Cagers were the icing on the Spartan cake as they completed the clean-sweep of championships in all four divisions, from Frosh all the way up to the Varsity level.

Starting off with a bang, the Spartans won their first two games assisted by the sharp-shooting one-two punch of Bill Bamish and Steve Miho.

With two wins already under their belts, the Spartans stormed through the Schurr Christmas Tournament going undefeated and thrashing South Pasadena, San Dimas, and Cantwell into submission.

As the season neared, Spartans sharpened up and were honed for league action. In the last pre-season game the Spartans were taken to the limit by a very tough San Gabriel Matador team in a spectacular, exciting quadruple overtime (yes, four overtimes!) game in which the Spartans were finally outlasted 70-76.

Odds-on favorites to sweep the M.V.L., the Spartans breezed through the first four league games, lost to a scrappy Arroyo team, and then swept the final round of league play to compile a 9-1 league record, a league title, and a C.I.F. playoff berth.

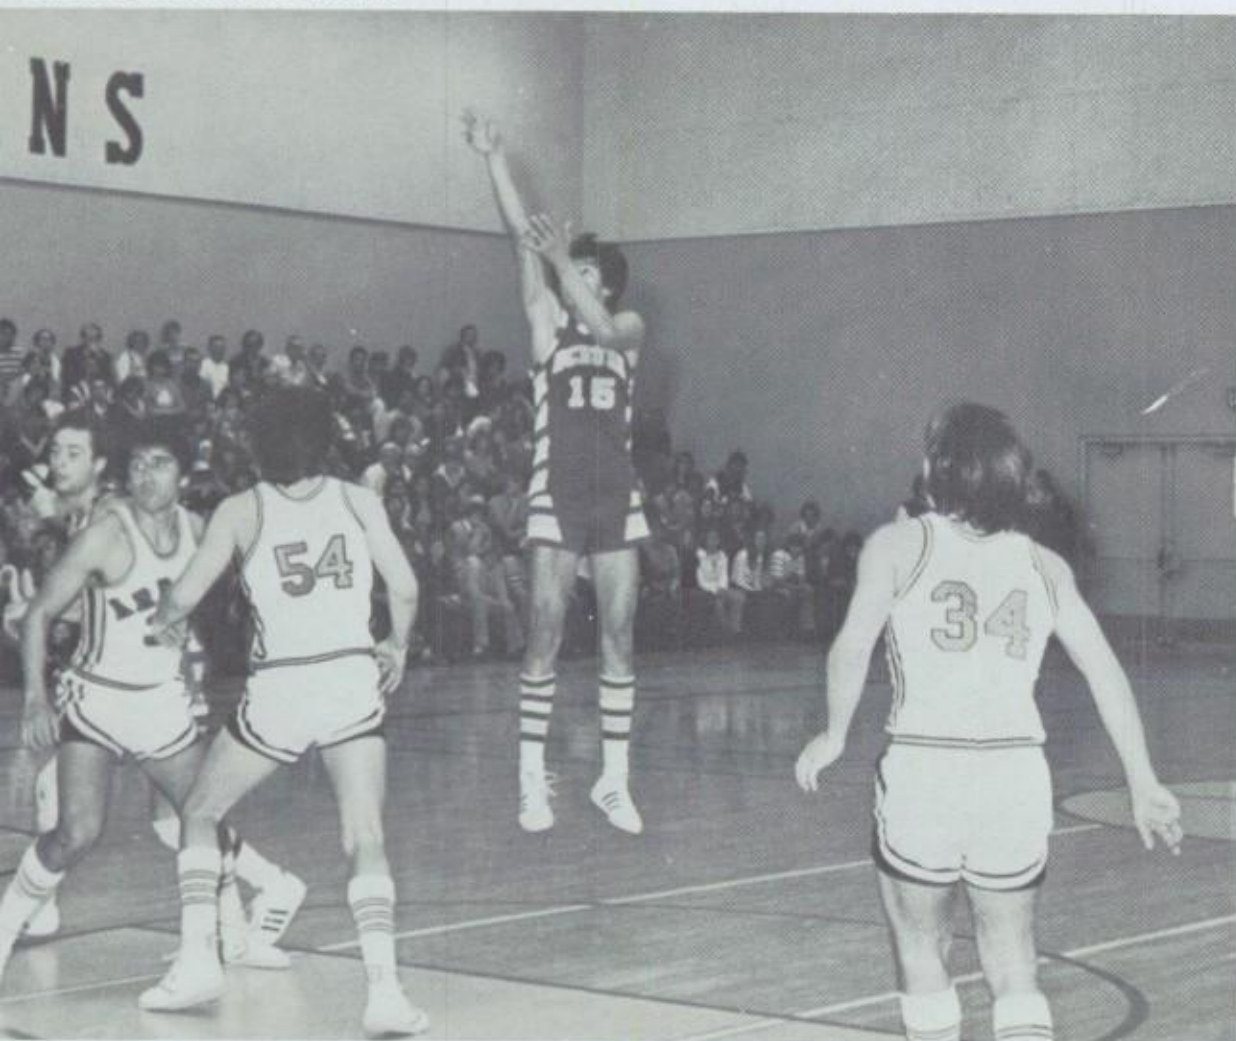

With all the ingredients of a winning team: speed; rebounding by Bill Bam-ish, Angelo Panetta, and Cesar Gerardo (who also led the team with 12 blocked shots for the season); outside shooting from all of the starting five, especially Steve Miho who averaged 18.8 points coupled with a 57% shooting percentage from the floor, and an overall winning attitude, the mighty Spartans felt ready for the real test: the premiere C.I.F. playoff game against the Indio Rajahs.

Before a jam-packed crowd, both teams came out shooting. It was nip and tuck as they ended the first half 40-35 with Schurr on the short end. Schurr partisans were hoping for one of the patented Spartan comebacks, but alas, as the cagers began to make their move, Cesar Gerardo's left shoulder popped out of its socket. This injury psychologically lifted Indio's spirits, and the Rajahs went on to tally thirteen unanswered points to break the contest wide open, leaving the Spartans behind 86-69.

Though not in the limelight as their players, the coaching staff deserves to receive a round of applause for their leadership and persistence. Head Coach Tommy Thompson and assistants Jim Duddy and Buzz Baviello, who also doubled as the J.V. coach, scouted opponents and created new offensive plays to stifle them. Thompson has a very impressive record, winning three championships in his six years at Schurr. None of the teams under his guidance has ever dipped below second place in the M.V.L.

Pro Basketball

Mind if I Dunk?

Since the merger of the N.B.A. and the now defunct A.B.A., a more wide-open, exciting game of basketball has evolved.

Layups and 15-foot jump shots have been replaced by slam-dunks and I.C.B.M.'s (inter-continental ballistic missiles; i.e. 30-foot "jumpers" or "shooting from the street.")

Even the concept of team play has changed; instead of setting up in the offensive zone, "run and gun" is now the name of the game. Since defense is stressed less, more points are being scored.

But the fans love it, attendances are up in almost every arena. And the most exciting team? The Philadelphia 76ers.

Thrilling the crowds with Lloyd Free's 30-foot I.C.B.M.'s and Darryl Dawkins' two favorite dunk shots: his "unbelievably terrifying De Laurentiis memorial gorilla stuff," and his "left handed spine-chiller supreme," the Sixers kept their fans ahead of the pack in the "standing ovation" department.

Of course the main attraction of the Sixers' three-ring circus was the man they called "The Doctor" . . . Julius Erving. Reputed to be the most exciting player in basketball, "Dr. J." lived up to his glorious legend.

Utilizing his outstanding jumping ability, the 6'6" Erving hit the heights as he whirled and twirled to the basket for his patented 360° dunk and many spectacular variations of the basic "stuff shot."

Nothing imaginable, however, compares with the awesome sight of "The Doc" swooping in from mid-court, blasting off from the free-throw line holding the ball aloft with one huge hand and finally descending from the stratosphere to slam the ball through the hoop for two points.

This new style of professional basketball developed from the playgrounds. Originating as a way to dazzle peers, some of the more gifted players took it one step further and used their natural talents to gain scholarships to big name colleges and eventually the N.B.A. Naturally the team owners sought these "show-boats" because they put people in the stands.

Nevertheless, the ends justified the means as the quality of the N.B.A. improved; the owners and players got richer; the fans ate it up, and everyone was happy.

But if you're ever in the Philadelphia "Spectrum," home of the 76ers, be prepared for the worse if you ask . . . IS THERE A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE?

Winning . . . A Becoming Tradition Among Spartanette Cagers

Backed by four years of consecutive Mission Valley League Championships, the Spartanettes kept on the move to retain that title in the M.V.L., making it their fifth year of championships.

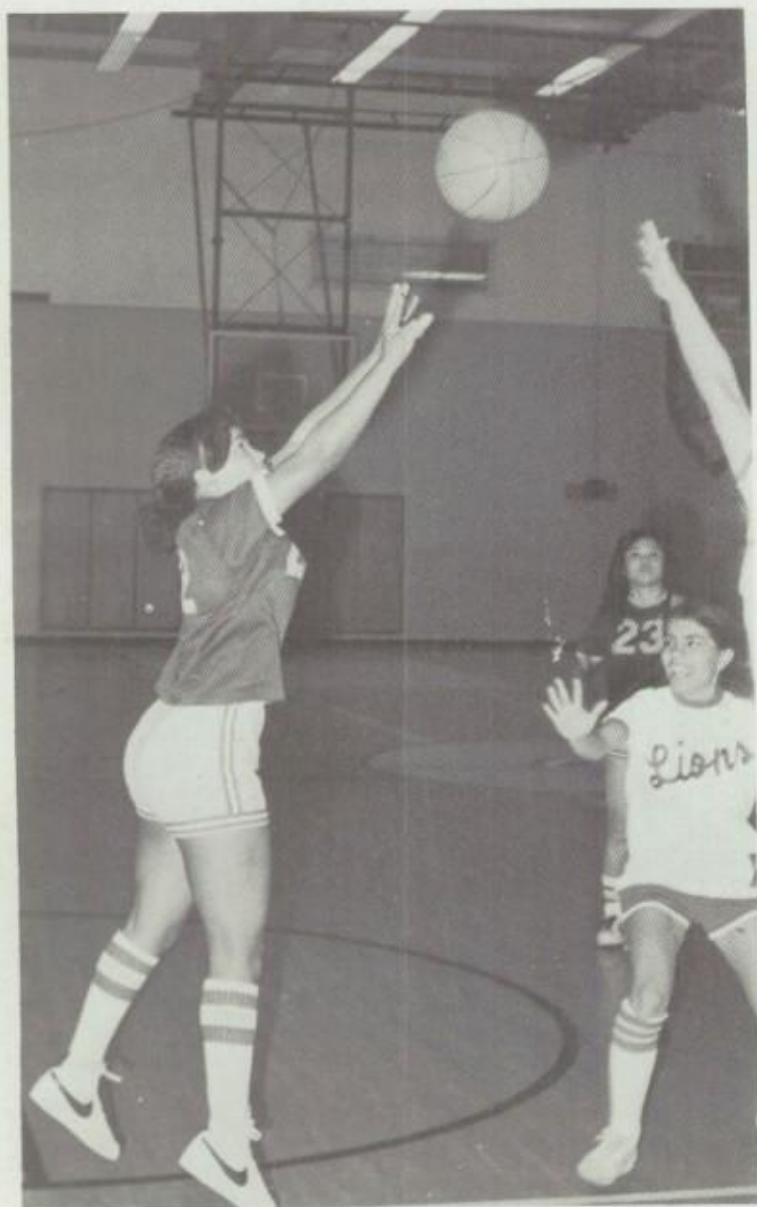

At the start of the pre-season, the dribblers took a step in the right direction towards their C.I.F. goal, by beating Los Altos, the number-one ranked team in the 3A division.

After ending their pre-season with a 7-3 record, the Spartanettes made an outstanding debut in their league opener. The Cagerettes met their first opponent, Rosemead, head on with the Cagerettes on top by one basket, 62-60. Following this same strategy of controlling the ball throughout the game, the dribblers outscored the Mountain View Vikings, 72-33.

The Spartanettes also had their share of narrow wins throughout the season, with victories depending upon one or two points. Two of these close calls were over Arroyo, 56-55, and Rosemead, 44-43. In both games, fast breaks and quickness became the key factors to sweeping the games.

The Cagerettes' invincible winning streak was snapped in their last game of the season against Arroyo, 55-58. The downfall of the Spartanettes was probably due to many small errors. Bad passes and missed free throws cost the team many valuable points, while the referees added to the Spartanettes' misfortunes. According to the team, the referees called too many plays against them. Although the girls lost, Coach Sue Hyllested commented, "I still feel we were better." With an outstanding 16-4 record for the entire season, the Spartanettes had to settle for the title of co-champs with Arroyo.

Individual qualities of the players aided their team's performance during the season considerably: Debi Hashiro, an all C.I.F. player, displayed quickness, good passing, accurate shooting and above all, leadership on the court. Gay Duffy proved to be an invaluable player, along with Cindy Jensen and Adrienne Bon. The sheer enjoyment of playing kept Stacey Honda, a sharp shooter, on the court throughout the season, despite two weakened ankles and a sprained finger. Though the knee injury to one of the top players, Nancy Murillo, affected the team, the combinations of hard work and teamwork under the exceptional coaching of Sue Hyllested, proved the Spartanettes to be winners again!

Injuries Cause Matmen's Downfall

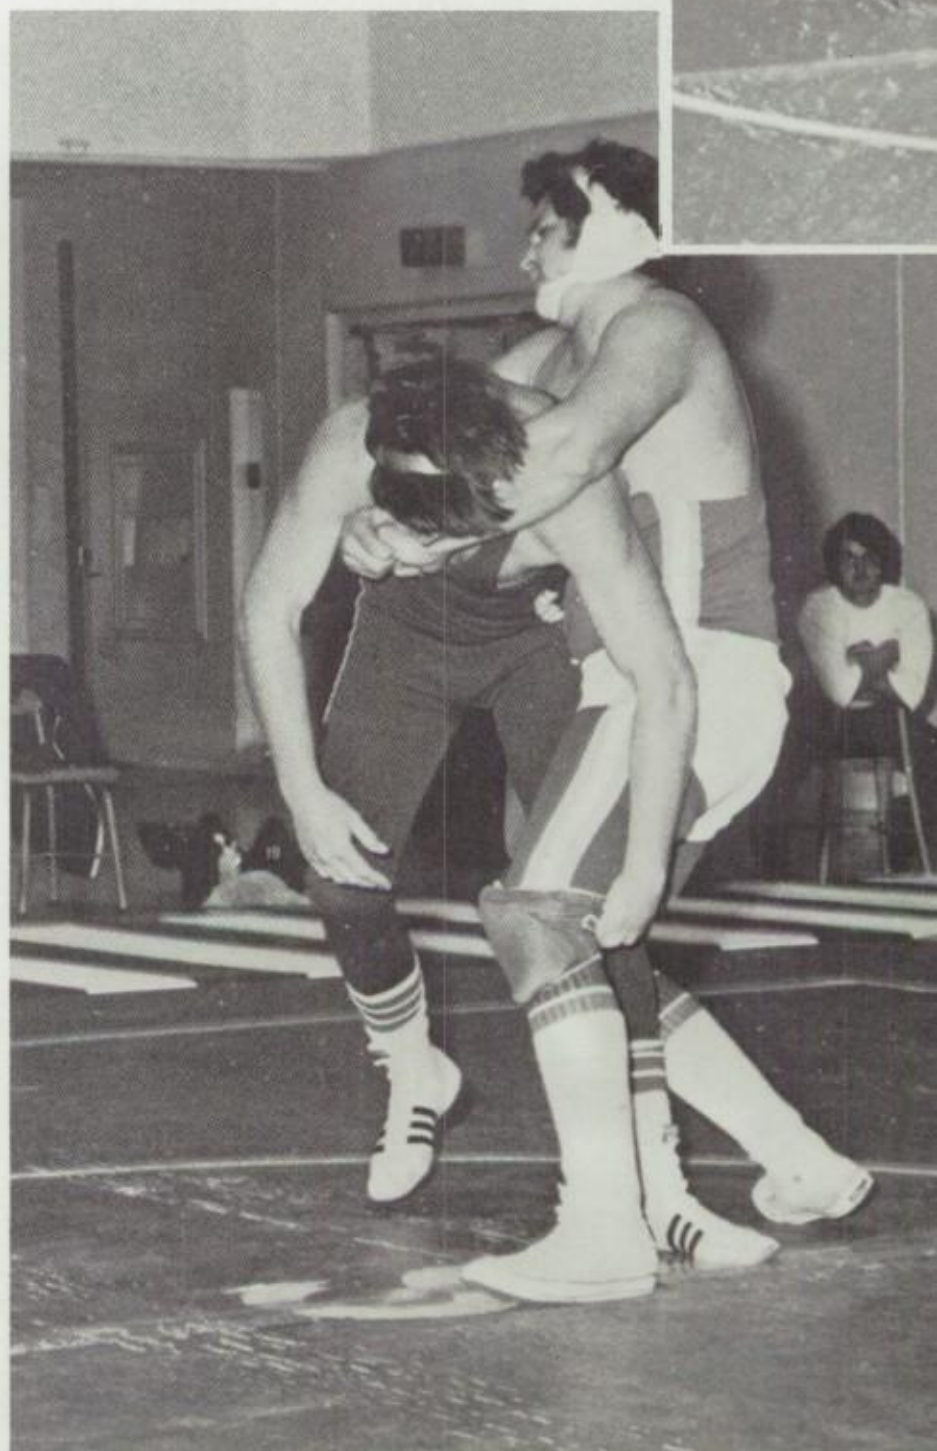

Preventing his adversary from attaining a "sit-out," Harun Mendez pulls him down

Utter frustration dominated the '77-'78 Varsity Wrestling Team. Before the season started the team looked promising with the return of seven lettermen; however, shortly after completing a semi-disappointing pre-season (3-2 record,) calamity struck the Spartans. Injuries began to spring up everywhere and every way, and before you knew it, five out of the original twelve matmen were the only ones healthy. Quickly that number was cut down to three, as the team continued to sputter. Finally the long season dragged to its end with the Spartans nursing a 3-7 overall record with no wins and five losses in league play.

Brightening up the rather dismal season were individual efforts given by Spartans Bill Gomez, Rudy Gerardo, and Bill Gonzales. Also contributing to the memorable parts of the season were the team victories over La Serna and Glenn. Perhaps something profitable was attained for next season due to the rash of injuries. With the varsity squad depleted, grapplers were promoted from the junior varsity team. Of this year's thirty-five matmen, twenty-six will return next season; each one will have gained some valuable experience for use next year. But, as far as this season is concerned, head coach Bill Pierce summed it up: "Injuries killed us."

Epilog: Collegiate Wrestling

Trying to tear their opponents apart limb from limb is the intent of most wrestlers, and most wrestlers seem to hate practice. But there are always exceptions like Olympic hopeful Lee Kemp who "loves to practice" because "it's just one of the few things that I don't mind doing."

Kemp, a 158-pound wrestler from the University of Wisconsin, takes his wrestling seriously and doesn't like to joke around during wrestling practice.

As a freshman in 1976, Kemp was the only major college wrestler in the country to go undefeated with a 39-0 record. Additionally in 1977, a month before the N.C.A.A. championships, his name was written in ink as the winner.

Lee Kemp Eyes '80 Olympics in Moscow

Kemp's only setback is his lack of aggressiveness; he has great speed and strength but refrains from using these two weapons. He would rather wait for his opponent to make a wrong move, then throw him to the mat and collect his two points instead of making a wrong move himself.

After Kemp failed to become an Olympic team starter and ended up on the second string, he was hardly absent from the gym.

The rest of the world had better beware of this gentle gladiator as he makes his quest for the ultimate in amateur wrestling . . . a gold medal in 1980 in Moscow. Because Lee is a winner, he doesn't miss his boat twice.

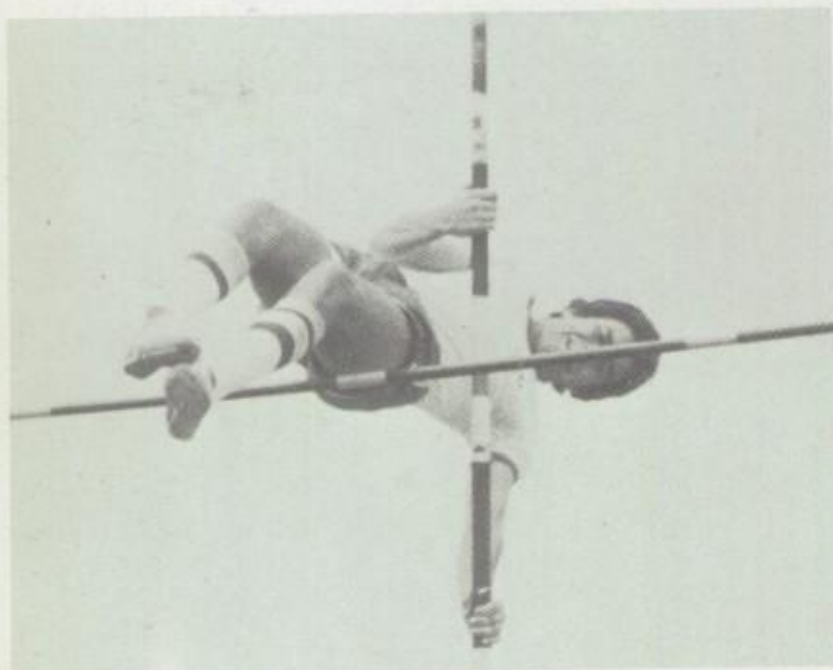

Vlink Unleashes His Awesome Pack

Never in headcoach Bruce Vlink's five-year career as varsity coach at Schurr has he directed such a cooperative and talented Varsity Track Team as the one that represented Schurr this season. And if the Spartans play up to their potential, the Mission Valley League title should be within their grasp.

A big asset to the trackmen this season was the strong participation of novice runners. Several of this season's top performers had never gone out for track before, making their success a pleasant surprise. Also aiding the Spartans was the team's overall dedication. Despite the alternating record rainfall and intense heat that plagued the pre-season, the striders never missed a day of practice.

Demonstrating skill and talent in their respective track events were: Alex Gonzalez in the half-mile, mile, and two-mile; Robert Nila in the 120-yard high hurdles; Armando Leuvano in the 100, 200, and 440-yard sprints; and Ricky Felix in the hurdles. Excelling in field events were: William Gonzalez in the shotput; Rick Jensen and Tom Roach in the discus; Raul Garcia in the pole vault; and Billy Gomez in the high jump. Helping out Vlink were coaches Steve Terry, Vince Negrete, Mike Jones, and Jerry DeSantis, whom Vlink proudly calls "The best staff in the San Gabriel Valley."

Bruce Jenner of San Jose introduced himself to the world with a gold medal-winning, world record performance in the 1976 Olympic decathlon. He was competing against some very stiff rivals; Nickolay Avilov of the Soviet Union (the 1972 Olympic record holder with a score of 8,454 points), and 23-year old Guido Kratschmer of West Germany. The field was so tough that it took Jenner eight events before he emerged with the lead.

Completing the ten events with a score of 8,618 points, Jenner set a new world's decathlon record, breaking Avilov's mark by 164 points. Here's a breakdown of Jenner's performances in each of the events: 100-meters, 10.9 seconds; 400-meters, 47.9; 1,500-meters, 4:14; long jump, 23'8"; high jump, 6'8"; 110-meter hurdles, 14.4 seconds; shot-put 47'6"; discus, 170'; javelin, 225'; and the pole vault, 15'9".

Since Jenner's gold medal performance he has become a celebrity; Hollywood gave him screen tests while television introduced him to cue cards. The only door that has not opened for him is the one leading to the movie screen. He once did a screen test for the role of Superman, but the director said he photographed too young. Alas, the result of eating too much Wheaties.

Every aspect and skill had to be equally worked to perfection in order for the girls to reach their goal. Harriers Washed Off Track by Rain

The outlook for the Girls' Varsity Track season was uncertain at the beginning of the year since coaches Steve Terry and Bruce Vlink had to start from scratch when several top girls failed to return. (Five of the best harriers had transferred to other schools.) This was not the end of their troubles, however. The unpredictable weather rained out the track area for several days, forcing the girls to jog on hard pavement. The disadvantage of not having access to the track area seemed to affect the girls' performance; in their first meet against Alhambra, the harriers lost by a close 47-52, and trailed Montebello by 10 in their second meet. Returning to keep their team's scores reasonably high in the various events were: Cindy Jensen in the high jump; Ramona Ebert at the shotput; runners Margaret Toy in the half mile and Irene Rodriguez in the mile; Lorraine Castellanos in the two miler; Delores Reyes in the sprint and Sondra Simonian in the hurdles.

Epilog: The Gymnastics Scene

Nadia

When the '76 Olympics ended, Nadia Comaneci cavorted home to Romania with a Queen's ransom of three gold medals, one silver, one bronze, and the notoriety of making Olympic history, for never in modern Olympics had a gymnastic performance been judged perfect until that summer.

American gymnastic coaches bent on perfecting our women gymnasts know that catching up to Nadia means increasing the risk factor in the training programs. Already coaches are injecting into all events more aerals, combinations of tumbling and aerals done in succession, and adaptations of men's gymnastics' triple somersault dismounts.

While American women gymnasts strive to attain Nadia's degree of perfection, Nadia is busy improving on her own perfection. Her ultimate goal is to get a perfect score in every event in a single competition.

Spartanettes Perpetuate Dynasty

Through rain and snow and even sleet, one indomitable reality has haunted rival schools in the Pacific League . . . the fact is that Schurr's gymnastic team is unbeatable.

In the six years that Schurr has been a high school, gymnastics has captured an amazing six league championships . . . a perfect record. 1978 has been a particularly satisfying year for Schurr's "Pixies" as the ripe talent of the 'Old Veterans,' such as Schurr's best all-around performer Ethel Almazan has been supplemented by some new faces from Schurr's feeder school, Macy Intermediate: Michelle McRavy, Yvonne Guerrero, and Stephanie Blancarte.

Sacrificing the Keppel Aztecs 123-92 in the league opener was only a warm-up for the Spartans as they defeated a very talented team from La Canada 34-22.

In his second year as varsity gymnastics coach, Mike Garcia has done a fine job of channeling the girls talent in the right direction which is exemplified as his teams continue to perpetuate Schurr's gymnastic dynasty.

Varsity Golf Team: Albert Flores, Keith Matsuda, Tracey Smith, Wayne Hasegawa, Eddie Carlin, James Montoya, Derek Mikuriya, Coach Rick Niccoli.

Jack Nicklaus and Tom Watson form one of the more intriguing new rivalries in today's sports scene.

Jack Nicklaus, considered to be one of the greatest golfers to have lived, is the only person to ever win sixteen major tournaments. But at the age of 37 Nicklaus is considered by some to be in the sunset years of his career.

While Nicklaus is stumbling, a young Tom Watson has found the P.G.A. fairways more sweet smelling than ever. The 27 — year old Watson over came a severe case of inexperience and, in 1975, won his first important contest, The British Open. Then came a two-year-long dry spell that ended in April of 1977 when Watson took the Masters, edging out Nicklaus, by two strokes in a heated battle. A short time later, the young Watson again felled the aging Nicklaus, this time by one stroke in the '77 British Open.

Of Course it's not really fit to compare the seasoned pro Nicklaus and the youthful Watson because of the difference in total victories, but at least it will be interesting to see whether Watson can replace Nicklaus as the top golfer on the P.G.A. tour this year.

Spartans Rough It After Wet Winter

Under the able guidance of Coach Rick Niccoli the competitive Varsity Golf squad once again jumped out to a fast start winning three of their first four confrontations.

Following the rainiest winter since 1947, Spartan golfers had to reach their peaks in hasty fashion for two reasons: an abbreviated pre-season and the fact that the rains caused the rough to become overgrown and made balls errantly hit out of bounds like Easter eggs, nearly impossible to find.

Through these adversities Albert Flores emerged as the number one golfer since he kept his scores in the low 70's. Not far behind Flores were Captain Tracey Smith, James Montoya, Wayne Hasegawa, Bill Viramontes, Keith Matsuda, Eddie Carlin, and Derek Mikuriya, who comprised the balance of the squad.

If Only There Were No Beginnings or Ends

When the Varsity Baseball squad took the field for the league opener against Rosemead, they felt they had the talent to take the Mission Valley League by storm, and until the last week of the season the Spartans were in the driver's seat.

When the ordeal began, the Spartans had two strikes against them: first, they were a young team (only four seniors in the starting lineup,) and second, the pre-season, (designed to expose younger players to Varsity action and gel the team,) was abbreviated by the wet winter.

When the regular season began the swatters went through the first eight games with only one loss. The pinnacle of the season was reached when Mission Valley League M.V.P. Sergio Martinez hurled a one-hitter against Schurr's arch-rival, Keppel.

The mittmen were so good that during their early hot streak they were ranked as high as number four in the C.I.F. Southern Section, the highest that any Schurr team has been ranked.

With two games left in the regular season, the Spartans were assured a playoff slot and only needed to knock off Arroyo to clinch at least a co-championship. Defeating Arroyo, however, turned out to be the big problem; with nothing to lose and a league title to gain, the Knights came out hungry and thrashed the over-confident Spartans two games in a row: the first game no-hitting them 5-0.

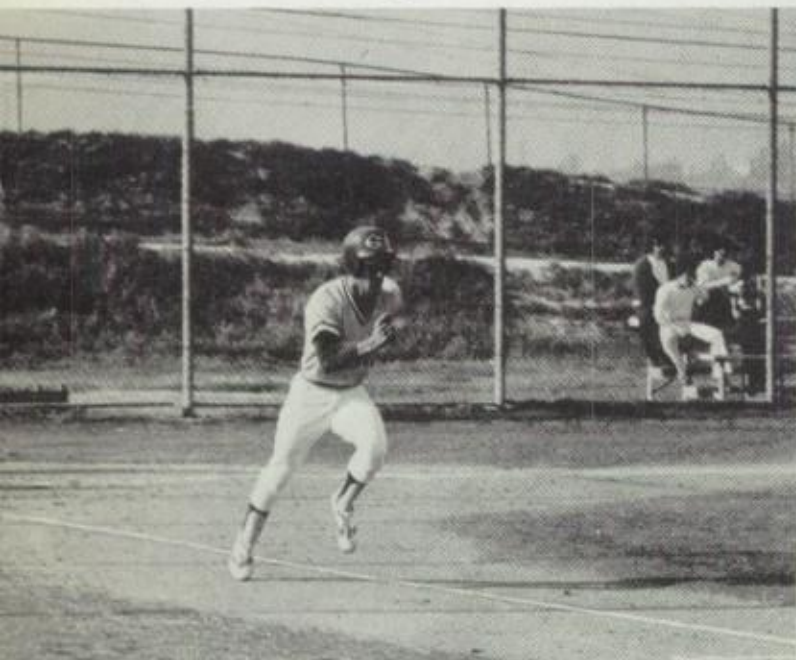

Stripped of "their" league pennant, Coach Hill's bunch still had a playoff shot so for the fourth time in the six years of Schurr's history they competed in post-season play.

The "Desert Hex" suffered by both football and basketball teams continued on the baseball team as they were overpowered by the Canyon Cowboys 8-3.

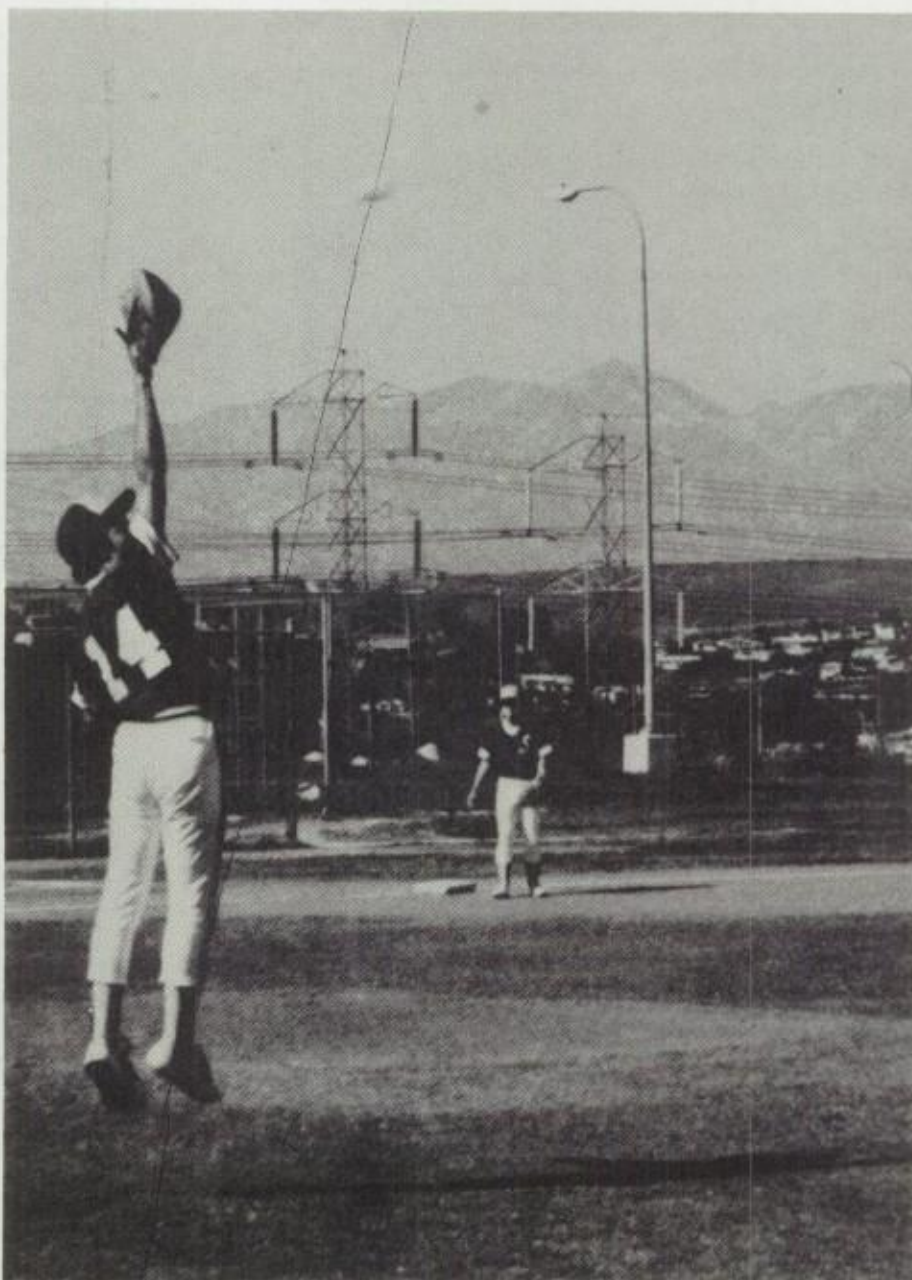

The '78 season will undoubtedly stay clearly imprinted on many minds. It was a rocky start with a bad ending, but it was a hell of a middle!

The expression, "Red-blooded American" has been tagged on to many of our heroes and idols; but one of our heroes, in L.A. at least, loaths the very mention of the word RED. He is Tommy Lasorda and the blood within his veins runs blue . . . DODGER BLUE!

After nearly a quarter of a century, 23 years, with the legendary Walt "Skipper" Alston at the helm of the Dodger ship, Lasorda had to fill a gaping abyss. Lasorda accomplished it with confidence and style, guiding them to the National League pennant; quite a feat for a rookie manager.

His players know that none of his stories are true but they all learn valuable lessons that make them better human beings.

Using the unorthodox method of demonstrative, exuberant vocalizing, Lasorda can be seen peppering his players one minute and cussing them the next. He also has an arsenal of outrageous stories designed to motivate his players, such as the swimmer who, after his sailboat sank a mile offshore, swam and swam then quit four feet from shore and drowned. Between stories and pep talks Lasorda sells and preaches Dodger Blue every minute.

His off-beat method of coaching has been very successful even in the minors where Lasorda won three straight pennants at Ogden and then was promoted to triple "A" where he won two pennants in the four years he managed there.

With help from the "Great Dodger in the sky," Lasorda has fulfilled all the expectations of the Dodger partisans, leading the Dodgers to the pennant, and preaching his gospel of "Dodger Blue."

Totally dominating the Mission Valley League, the powerful Junior Varsity gridmen went undefeated in league play to take the M.V.L. crown and compile an overall 8-1 record. Their only loss was to Bell Gardens in the pre-season, but the Spartans managed to defeat the Lancers in a later rematch. The team's performance was a tribute to the hard work by Head Coach Bill Peirce and Assistant Coach Ben Negrete, and especially to the effort put together by the defensive and offensive unit led by linebacker Marco Gonzales and runningback Charles Lee.

Meanwhile, the Sophomore gridgers struggled through their season, finishing with a 2-3 league record. They were led by M.V.P. Sam Ceja, who doubled as tight-end and defensive-end, and runningback/linebacker Mark Mercado. The Spartans' main problems were lack of depth and size, for they lost several talented sophomores to the Varsity and Junior Varsity teams. Considering these set-backs, Head Coach Steve Wright and Assistant Coach Casey O'Gorman did a commendable job.

M.V.L. Crown a Touchdown Away From Frosh Browns

Cruisin' through a spectacular season, this year's Freshmen football team, guided by Coach Bruce Vlink and assisted by Mando Marentes, demolished opponents and wound up with a second place finish in the Mission Valley League.

The gridgers found the winning formula, both offensively and defensively. They displayed their explosive offense by scoring an impressive 135 points, while the defense proved nearly invincible by shutting out five opponents and allowing the other teams only 40 points during the season. Leading the attack was M.V.P. runningback Louie Galacia, and spearheading the defense was linebacker Joe Chaides.

Starting off on the right foot, the team blanked Monte Vista 13-0 and Glenn 22-0 in their first two pre-season games, but then tripped over a Westminster team in their third contest, getting edged 0-6. The gridgers did away with their last pre-season foe, Katella, by a score of 19-14 leaving the Spartans with a 3-1 pre-season scorecard.

The Spartans began M.V.L. play with a 13-0 shutout over Rosemead, then suffered their only league defeat against league champ El Monte in a closely contested battle, 0-6. This loss left the team with a 1-1 record and set the stage for their final surge. Coming down the stretch, the Spartans defeated their final three adversaries; Mountain View, 20-14; Arroyo, 27-0; Keppel, 21-0. The valiant gridmen came in second place with a 4-1 league record, a mere one-half game behind El Monte.

Pacing Each Other Harriers Take 2nd Place

Under the direction of Coach Steve Terry, the Junior Varsity Cross Country team placed second in the Mission Valley League.

The harriers' record for this season was a strong 6-1. One of their key meets was against Keppel where hero, Henry Perez, succeeded in allowing his team to rob their rivals of expected victory, beating them 29-26.

In conquering Keppel, the runners earned their way to league finals held at Mt. Sac; there, four out of ten individuals placed 1st, 2nd, 4th, and 6th to win the meet.

Sparked by individual talent, the Frosh-Soph striders obtained a second place berth in the Mission Valley League. By overcoming their weaknesses as the season progressed, the harriers displayed significant improvements shown by their 5-3 record. The number one runner, Diego Mesa, set the pace for the Frosh-Soph team's superior competitive spirit.

The Junior Varsity Tennis Team completed a very successful season sharing first place in the Mission Valley League. After winning several key matches, led by the strong performances of Nancy Toy and Paula Silverfarb in singles and Marinell Santos and Lynne Katayama in doubles, the netters finished with a 13-2 record for the league title.

The team was led by rookie coach Angie Minnasian who was the number one tennis player at C.S.U.L.A.

Recognized for their outstanding performances, Marinell Santos and Lynne Katayama were named Co-Most Valuable Players.

A young, returning veteran, sophomore Lina Dominguez captured the title of most valuable player. Freshmen Sandy Galvan and Cindy Terrazas also showed great improvement, having played second string during pre-season, then moving up to first string before the season commenced.

The team was led by rookie coach Irene Fashacht, a graduate from C.S.U.L.B.

Depleted J.V.'s Survive Varsity Draft

Surviving their season in respectable fashion, the Junior Varsity Wrestling team salvaged a somewhat floundering Schurr wrestling season. Finishing above .500 in league (3-2 record) the Spartans were in title contention until their last match, a loss to league champ Arroyo.

Surpassing the varsity squad, the J.V. matmen achieved the near-impossible task of keeping their team from collapsing at mid-season when the varsity team became plagued by injuries and the J.V. grapplers were forced into action at the varsity level to fill the gaps. With several of their top matmen gone, the J.V.'s season might have been lost if it hadn't been for some great coaching by Bill Pierce and some excellent performances given by the team. Using what little experience they had, the J.V.'s won several contests by sheer desire and determination, sometimes barely scraping together enough points to squeak past their opponents.

Ripping M.V.L. to Pieces J.V.'s Take Crown

Continuing this year's Schurr basketball domination over the Mission Valley League was the surprising Junior Varsity Basketball Team. Under the mentorship of head coach Buzz Baviello, the cagers compiled a 15-8 overall record and went undefeated in league competition, thereby capturing one of the school's four men's basketball titles.

Of all the Spartan basketball teams, the J.V.'s underwent the most trying pre-season. Hampered with inconsistency, the team finished with a 5-8 pre-league record. Because of this disappointing showing, the Spartans weren't expected to clean up on the league as they did. Finally finding the right winning combination, the J.V.'s turned their season around. After first devouring Rosemead, the team went on down the line knocking off their opponents one by one. Near the end of the season, the team was hard pressed to keep its M.V.L. record unblemished. But rising to meet the challenge, The Spartans downed Keppel and Mountain View in close come-from-behind contests. Throughout their 10-0 league season, the cagers were led by the consistently superior play of Charles Lee, Sam Adams, and Frank Laro.

Sophomores Swipe M.V.L. Crown

A fast moving offense teamed up with an aggressive defense provide the winning combination for this year's Sophomore Basketball Team.

The Spartan pre-season wasn't what the squad anticipated, showing a 2-3 record, but by the end of their league season the sophomores came up with an outstanding 9-1 league record and ripped the league title of the backs of a strong Arroyo team.

Noted for his exceptional coaching prowess, guiding the freshmen football team to a second place league finish, Bruce Vlink showed his versatility by leading the sophomore basketball team to the M.V.L. title.

They Were the Start of Something Big

Perfection, speed, and accuracy were the keys to this year's impressive 10-0 league record in the M.V.L. by Schurr's Freshmen Basketball squad.

With their awesome win in the league opener against Rosemead 57-27, the frosh team was well on its way to clinching a strong first place finish.

throughout their illustrious season, the "agony of defeat" nearly touched them midway through the season when they encountered the hungry Arroyo Knights.

Putting Schurr's perfect 4-0 record on the line, the Knights took the Spartans through two overtime periods before finally succumbing to the Spartan onslaught 43-38.

Coach David Hokyo and Assistant Coach Lanny Kusaka, both in their first coaching assignments at Schurr, did an outstanding job all through the season turning these freshmen into a "powerhouse" of the Mission Valley League, and building a solid foundation for the basketball program at Schurr.

The Junior Varsity dribblers, headed by Coach Jeanne MacKay were small compared with other teams, but made up for their lack of size in speed.

At the opening of their pre-season, the Cagerettes were a smash as they creamed Edgewood, 57-24. After such an easy win, the Spartanettes were ready to face any other team, and did so by slaughtering every one of their opponents, completing their pre-season with a perfect 11-0 record.

Led by Doreen Yoshimi, following in the footsteps of Debi Hashiro, and Lynn Okamura, the smallest of the team and who, according to Coach MacKay, "drives to the basket and has a lot of guts" the Spartanettes were able to close the season with a grand finale against Arroyo, 41-26, giving the Spartan girls a 7-3 record for the season and second place in the Mission Valley League.

For her first year of coaching, Coach Jeanne MacKay did a fantastic job getting the girls conditioned and ready for the season. Throughout the year she encouraged the girls to take advantage of every opportunity they had to score points and kept their confidence up during their short period of depression, after losing top player Edith Duffy to the Varsity Basketball team.

When asked to give her opinion of the season, key player Doreen Yoshimi commented, "We had a good season this year due to the closeness of the team, including the coach. With her plays and opinions, as well as our own opinions and skills, we put it all together to do our best in every game."

Frosh-Soph Lead Harriers Over Hurdles

This year's J.V. Track Team put in an admirable performance in all track and field events. The team's enthusiasm was great enough to nearly overcome the points lost through forfeits caused by their lack of numbers. Sprinters Leonardo Hernandez and Paul Li kept the team confident by turning in consistently superior performances.

The Frosh-Soph team got off to a slow start this season because several top performers who went out for basketball came in late for the track season. However, the trackmen did have one of the top freshmen discus throwers in the league, Greg McDaniel, as well as sprinter Derek Sill; Frosh-Soph ½ mile record holder Nick Atkins; high jumper Rick Bamish; sprinter Louie Galacia; shotputter Robert Eckholdt; and distance runners Ed Plantillas and Diego Mesa.

Sprinter Becky Baltazar led the Girls' J.V. Track Team in its pursuit of the league title under the coaching of Bruce Vlink, Steve Terry, Mike Jones, and Larry McCafferty. All four also coached Boys' J.V. and Frosh-Soph track.

Underclassmen Pile Up Victories

Talented Junior Varsity and Freshman tennis teams, under the tutorship of Coach Vince Salinas, enhanced Schurr's courts this season. Filled to the brim with skilled netters, both the J.V.'s and the Frosh teams fared well in league competition.

Starting out of the gates fast, the Junior Varsity Tennis unit compiled an awesome 3-0 pre-season record, clobbering opponents from La Mirada, Sierra, and Bell Gardens by scores of 26-2, 25-3, and 28-0. After stumbling over their first league opponent, the Rosemead Panthers, the netters regained their poise and won their next two games, bettering their record to 2-1 in the M.V.L. with twelve games to go.

Leading the Spartans in their quest for the league crown were number one and two singles players Peter Leong and Charlie Lee and the top doubles team of John Castillo and Brian Tsubokawa.

Not to be outdone by their elders, the Freshman Tennis team also turned in promising performances. Led by singles players Dave Okawa and Melvin Quan, the talented netters raged to a 3-0 start. The frosh too had twelve games to go, with three of them against top-rated, arch-rival Mark Keppel.

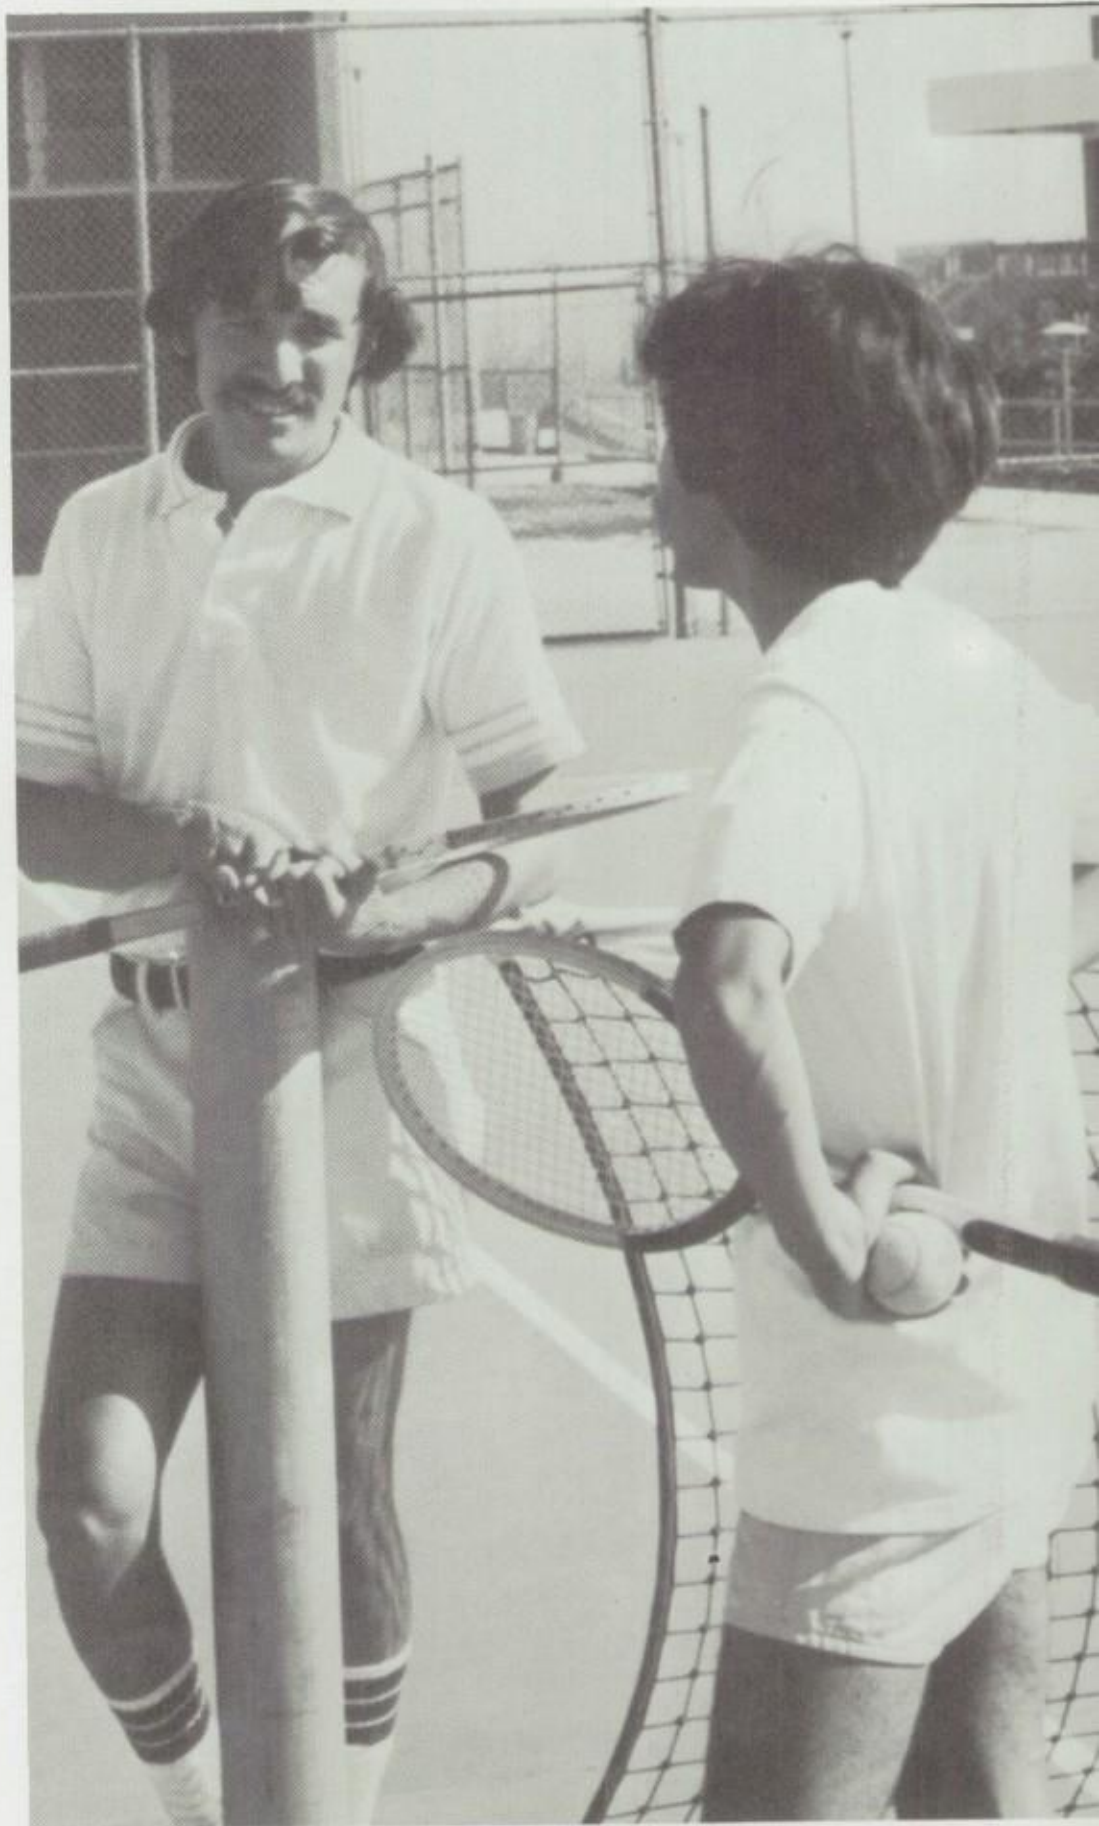

Because many high schools don't have freshman teams, the Spartans didn't have any pre-season matches. To make up for their lack of competition, the netters entered a few weekend tournaments where they gained practical experience.

Hoping to pool their talent and experience to produce a winning season, was this year's Junior Varsity Golf Team. Under the direction of Coach Rick Niccoli, the linksmen had a good shot at the league crown. Despite the unusual rain that beset their pre-season, the Spartans still played with skill and tenacity.

Behind the drives of Kenny Gonzalez and Jon Viramontes, the J.V.'s opened their league season with a bang, a 23-7 rout of visiting, arch-rival Keppel. Thoroughly out-playing and out-shooting the Aztecs, the Spartans showed that they have what it takes to capture the league title.

Watching the ball all the way pays off for Frank Leyva as he smashes a shot up the middle

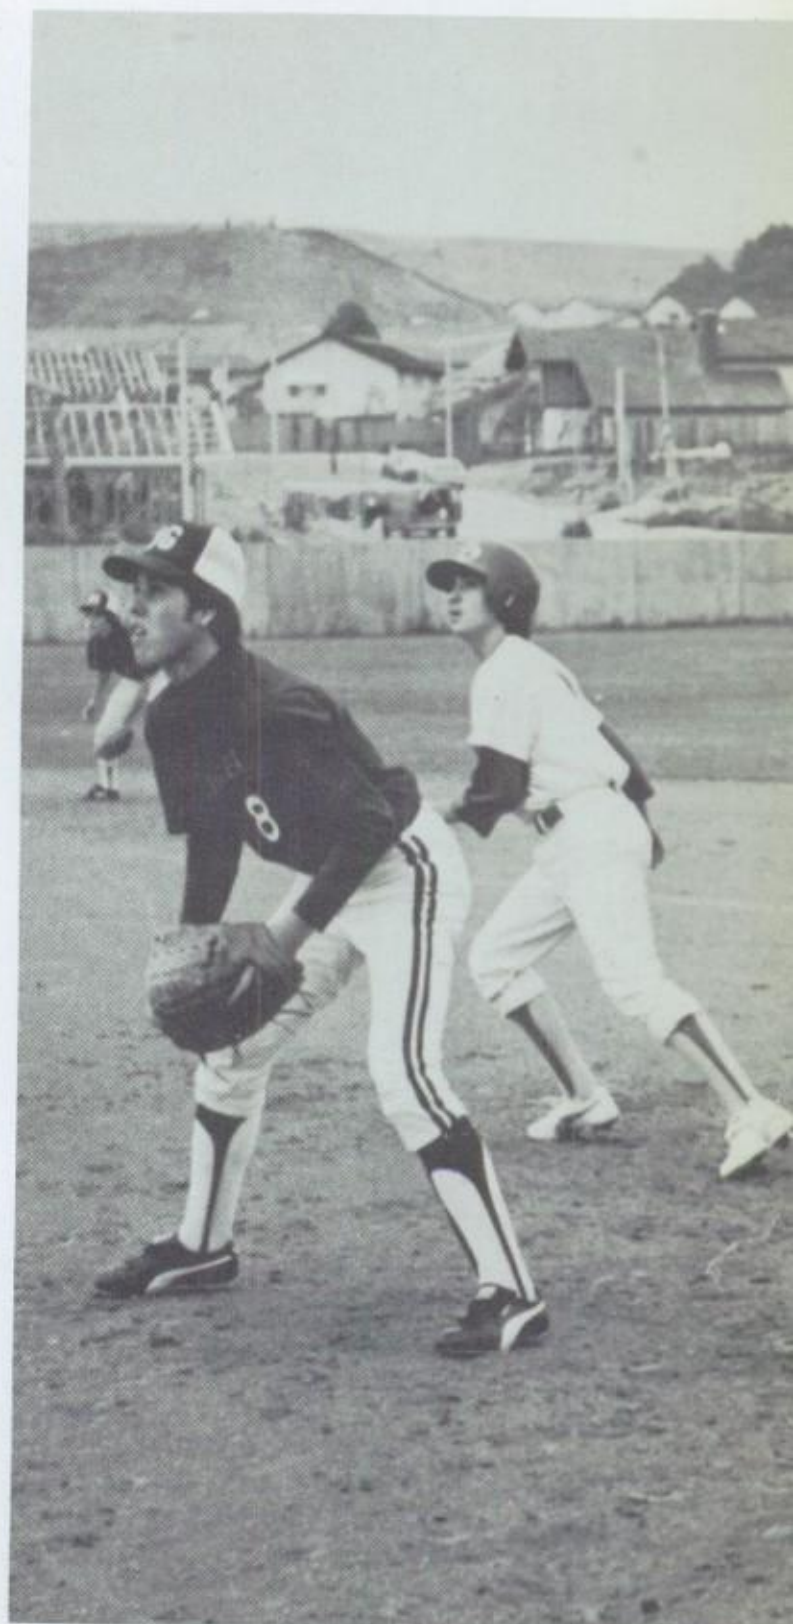

Defensively-Minded J.V.'s Lack Frosh's Hot Bats

It must have been frustrating for the J.V. pitching staff, for although they usually kept their opponents' scores down to respectable levels, the Spartan hitting attack failed to materialize until the fourth league game against Keppel (which, incidentally, was their first victory,) when the Spartans bombed the Aztec pitchers for a 10-1 victory led by a three-run homer by Pat Hirscher and a pinch-hit triple by Steve Dickman.

Another factor that hindered the Spartans was that they often fell victim to bad breaks either by a run against Schurr caused by an error, or a run that the Spartans should have scored but couldn't come through with. The result was that the J.V. squad lost the first three league games by a single run.

On the other hand, the traveling partners of the J.V.'s, the Frosh team, faring better than the J.V.'s, hovered about the .500 mark and attributed their record to their "big sticks."

Led by the power hitting of Dennis Rihn and the spray hitting of Joey Jordan, the Frosh squad knocked the ball around against all their opponents. The defensive aspect of the Spartans was piloted by pitching ace Charlie Peralta.

Spartans Trek Across the Continent

Ancient ruins, extraordinary castles, and beautiful countrysides were among the many sites visited by the A Cappella Choir and Band tour to Europe during summer. Led by Mr. David Lebow, twenty-four students traveled throughout the continent over a span of thirty-seven days.

The first country visited was England. Amidst the cold weather, the group spent five well-traveled days in London, viewing the changing of guards at Buckingham Palace, visiting the renowned Oxford University and reliving the Shakespearean era in Stratford.

Next on the itinerary was the city of Amsterdam. Fascinating adventures included the group's ride on a watertight canalboat, an expedition through Anne Frank's house, and a long awaited walk through the "red-light" district.

Wonderful Copenhagen provided sunshine to the group's previously rainy stay in Europe. And Munich, Germany, provided days of shopping, touring, and night life for the highly spirited travelers.

Providing a change of atmosphere was the unique city of Vienna, Austria, built in a circular fashion. Beautiful weather highlighted the stay in the town of famous composers.

Italy allowed the group to finally experience summer weather. Venice, Florence, and Rome were visited by the kids who learned about ancient history, Michaelangelo, and Catholic religion.

Delicious food was eaten, gifts were bought, and of course diaries were kept. The memories, experiences, and feelings of maturity will always remain within these young adults.

On Monday, October 24, Schurr began its second annual Spirit Week when spirited Spartans disguised themselves with crazy hats and zany sunglasses.

Then Schurr became a tropical island Tuesday; on Wednesday students showed fantastic spunk by twinning with a friend and coming to school wearing extraordinary threads. Groucho, Harpo, and Zeppo showed up on Thursday, as did Raggedy Ann, members of KISS, and a lot of other "stars" dressed up for impersonation day.

Spartans had all sorts of races going on. Each class hopped its way across the amphitheater on pogo sticks, munched down marshmallows, reverted to childhood by drinking coke out of baby bottles, and pairing off with a friend to run in the three legged race.

Each day at nutrition time, ambitious freshmen pompously displayed new school spirit. Sophomores burst into gallant action on Tuesday to display vivaciousness. Juniors began competing on Wednesday, while the Class of '78 stepped into the swing of things by trying to out-race their fellow classmates on Thursday.

Sammy and Sandy Spartan were chosen by the underclasses during the week: freshmen Sammy and Sandy Spartan were Cindy Terrazas and Joey Jordan; sophomores elected Shari Gong and Joe Babcock; juniors picked Carol Salas and Chris Green.

Seniors Make Clean Sweep

Overshadowed by disorderly conduct, Spirit Day '77 still came out as a glistening success. Predawn egg-hurlers were plentiful around campus as spirited building decorators had to make mad dashes into restrooms to dodge the flying debris.

As the nutrition bell sounded, the amphitheatre was instantly filled with ecstatic students. Abruptly halting the yelling competition, U.S.B. Advisor Mr. Lincoln reprimanded the student body for its malicious behavior which included striking students with rolls of toilet paper and egging rival classmen's floats. The student body, though momentarily hushed, exploded with the opening of the competition for the coveted spirit jug. The seniors triumphed in this, as well as the trash can and building-decorating competitions.

By the time students were dismissed for the day, the arcade was filled with bustling crowds and the aroma of delicious delicacies. While reminiscing with returning alumni, students could feast on fried won-tons prepared by A.S.I.A. Club or pucker-up to a pickle sold by Interact. Also, the Chess Club sold hot dogs, while cotton candy and Mexican churros were vended by the senior class. The annual dunking machine made lots of money for the Varsity Club, and a putting game helped raise funds for the Journalism Department.

Meanwhile, the sound of guitars hit the air and people rushed to the senior park to groove to the sounds of "Rock Unlimited."

At 2 o'clock, when the festivities drew to a close, exhausted alumni and students bid each other farewell and promised to return next year.

Sinking the Vikings, 27-0, the Spartans captured their first victory at Homecoming in three years.

At halftime with the Spartans taking an early lead, 20-0, the first entry for the class of '80 victoriously led the procession of floats. Their winning float featured an electric lightning bolt "zapping" the Vikings.

Following the floats came the five candidates for Homecoming Queen chauffeured in sporty Fiats. Last year's Princesses Debbie Fox, Rachel Bissey, Cathy Yanagi, Jackie Ramirez, and Queen Gracie Martinez assisted in the crowning of the court. Although not on the field due to misconduct of the students during Spirit Day, the Spartan band provided spirit-lifting music from the stands and the coronation went on as planned. The overwhelmed Gina Absnaider was crowned queen, along with glamorous princesses Rachel Villegas, Tina Mui, Lisa Joko and Angie Berru.

Youth Outrides Experience

On a balmy November evening several hundred excited students and faculty rushed to the large gym to witness a test of man's survival — who could remain longest on their appointed asses. Whether it be seniors or coaches, all could look forward to those morning-after bruises, aches, and pains acquired in Schurr's sixth annual Donkey Basketball Game.

The Schurr-footed senior men welcomed their able female counterparts to join in the ride-off against the coaches. The crowd roared as the beasts of burden took their passengers for a ride they'd not soon forget.

At the half, with a 24-20 score, seniors hooving ahead of the coaches, entertainment was provided by the multi award-winning Spartan Drill Team. Performing a roof-raising routine to the score from "Rocky," the Drill Team lit up the gym with a combination of flashlight power and vivaciousness.

As play resumed, the faculty looked as if they might be enroute to a second straight victory via coach Steve Terry who, with his stubborn teammate, sunk a series of crowd-pleasing baskets. But, as the final buzzer sounded, the seniors had out-galoped their elders.

FOR CHRISTMAS BALL

Elegance was the key word for the 1977 Christmas Ball sponsored by Girls' League. The large gym, having the advantage of size and modern renovations, was the site of this starlit occasion. The prospect of a spacious dance floor and more attractive surroundings drew the largest crowd in the Christmas Ball's seven year history.

As the festively bedecked couples began to arrive, the air was filled with the sweet aroma of mistletoe, fresh flowers and enticing perfume.

Then with a lively downbeat, "Carry On" and its irresistible music had everyone on the dance floor kicking up their heels. Invigorated by the brisk dancing, the couples frequently hustled to the refreshment tables for cool thirst quenchers and delectable goodies abundantly provided by Girls' League.

Reigning as queen over the yuletide gala, Lupe Rico added an extra touch of class, as did her court of princesses Senior Cindy Glaze, Junior Debbie Salcido, Sophomore Shari Gong, and Freshman Linda Olivera.

Lasting from 8 o'clock until midnight, the dance concluded with the band's disco version of the seasonal favorite "Jingle Bell Rock."

Pictures taken by alumnist Gigi Mui provided the couples an ever-lasting view of a very special night in their lives.

Featuring the Freshman Choir, Vocal Ensemble, and A Cappella Choir, all under the direction of Mr. David Lebow, the potpourri of music spread warm cheer and seasonal spirit to the full house audience.

Selections sung by the Freshman Choir included Bach's "May God Smile On You", "Sleigh Ride", and "Come Comrades"; nostalgic barbershop harmonies and a calypso number accented by choreography was the Vocal Ensemble's contribution; contemporary selections sung by the A Cappella Choir, including excerpts from "Porgy and Bess" and "The Wiz." Two numbers assisted by soloists Angela Houston and Charlie Pecots, "Abraham, Martin, and John" and "Amen," brought the show to an impressive finish.

Cagers and Coronation Highlight Homecoming

The night of February 10th was brisk and clear despite a week of devastating rains and floods. Equally crisp was the force of the Spartan basketball squad on the occasion of Schurr's annual Basketball Homecoming. With the powerful Arroyo Knights, the only squad that could clinch the Mission Valley League title from Schurr's grasp as the opponent, the game was all the more exciting.

As the teams dispersed into the locker rooms, preparations began for the coronation of the 1978 Basketball Homecoming King and Queen. For the first time the ceremony was to be held at half-time rather than at the dance later. An arch of flowers provided the appropriate site for the event as juniors Cesar Gerardo and Susie Yanagi were the announced royal couple. The court, freshmen Ron Simmons and Carol Garcia, sophomores Israel Rosales and Laurie Baefsky and seniors Eddie Noriega and Cathy Kisse, as well as the King and Queen, were crowned and presented bouquets of roses.

As the game resumed, Arroyo inched up to Schurr, making one overtime period necessary to determine a winner. With just seconds remaining, the Spartan squad surged ahead and won the contest, 73-70.

Next, it was on to the small gym, where the Homecoming Dance, sponsored by the sophomore class, was about to begin. The lively and soulful band, "Sting" provided the sounds as the excited students provided the moves.

In and Out of It

Permed, streaked or just plain short, were some of the many new hair styles that strode across the campus this year.

The impact of the popular Randy Newman's hit, "Short People" was noticeable around Schurr, for many students stepped up into the school year five to seven inches taller with their stylish high heels.

T-shirts, as always, were a continuing fashion; The "T-shirters" were seen around campus with sayings like "Spartans 79," "A Chorus Line," "Mickey Mouse Club Member," or "Rocky."

Rock music had a twist added to it as "punk rock" entered the world of music Groups such as the "Sex Pistols" and the "Ramons" were a few of the many groups that provided the new style of rock. Along with punk rock came the punk jewelry craze: safety pins used as earrings and hair styles as the "wisp."

Many fashion conscious students expressed themselves with the "Vogue" look — pants tucked in boots, glitter-threaded tops and calf-length sweaters while there were always those who chose to stick to the comfort of their "oldie but goodie" blue jeans and tennis shoes.

Violin Strings Tune in to Record Audiences

Producing one of the most dramatic plays performed on Schurr's stage, the Department of Performing Arts presented its winner musical, Fiddler on the Roof. Opening on February 2, the show ran an unprecedented four nights.

This, and the fact that "Fiddler," was a universally well loved play, accounted for the great box office profits and packed houses. The story, set in pre-revolutionary Russia, deals with Tevye, played with great feeling and expertise by Tom Couch, and Golde, his wife, portrayed by vocally gifted Judy Gargalione, along with their five daughters, Joanne Yorba, Diane Scott, Laurie Baefsky, Sherri Elkaim and Elisa Sepulveda all of whom lived during these hard times in a small village, Anatevka. Other characters as Motel, Yente, Lazar Wolf, Perchik and Fiedka played by Robert Martinez, Vicki Melkonian, Danny Gallegos, Mark A. Flores and Ralph Rubio helped to depict the great joys and sorrows experienced in the poverty-stricken settlement.

Musical numbers, choreographed by alumnist Victoria Paterson, were filled with joy and dancing supplied by the "Fiddler" chorus. Authentic Russian and Jewish dance steps were blended to give a flavor of "yiddish-kite." Tradition, a key concept to the play, was carried out as agile dancers Mark K. Flores, Jorge Jatib, and Derek Sill did a breath-taking bottle dance with Diane Olivera, as the fiddler, represented the keeping of these traditions even though the world in 1905 was changing as dramatically as it is today.

U.S.B. Sponsors Dancing for Dollars

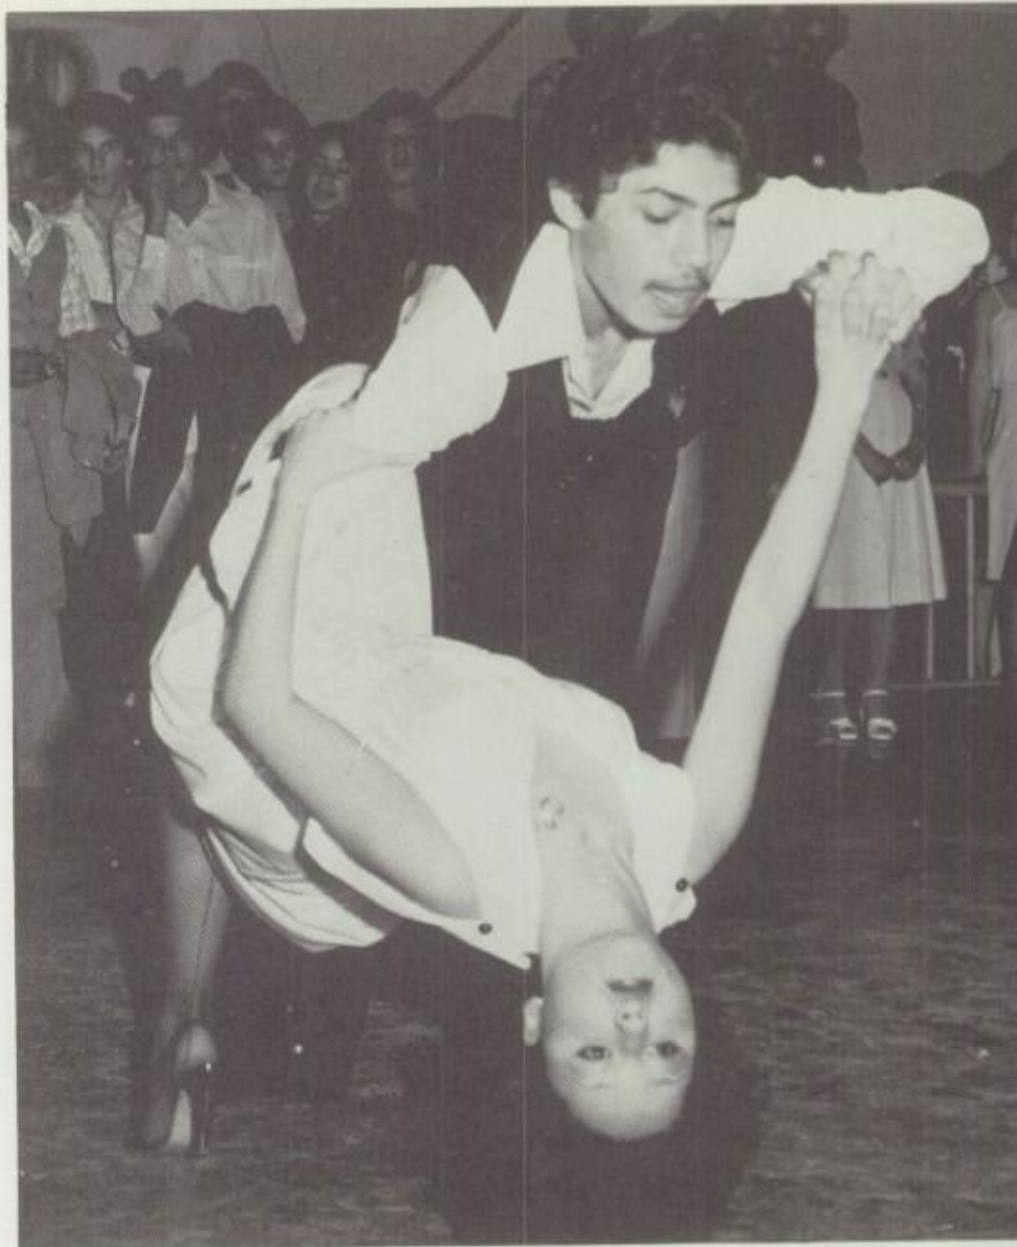

Devotion was the key to Schurr's first March of Dimes-Battle of the Bands Dance held on Friday, March 19. Students of all grades combined their efforts towards one major cause raising money for the March of Dimes. For one week preceeding the event, bustling money-collectors could be seen all over campus jangling money cans asking people for donations.

The Battle of the Bands opened with "Westwind" jamming out electrifying notes of various tunes by rock artists such as "Santana." Also participating in the contest was "Nice 'n Easy," whose disco sound got dancers prancing and got themselves a first-place trophy.

Highlighting the fund-raising evening was a disco dance contest consisting of seven couples decked out in their most glamorous outfits. Each couple gracefully flowed into their complex dance routines to the music of their choice while being judged by band members and members of the dance's sponsor, U.S.B. First place was awarded to freshmen Billy Ebarb and Monica Salcido, whose sparkling performance to Calypso Breakdown's "Manhattan Skyline" surpassed all of the remaining six couples.

Recognition for collecting the most money was given to Todd Spitzer and Kelly Townsend who raised seventy dollars out of the total $1,060 netted from the affair. Each was named Mr. and Ms. March of Dimes and received a pair of tickets to California Jam II.

Tradition-Breaking Disco D.J. Arrives in Dog Patch

With the coming of spring when flowers and love began to bloom, male and female Spartans began their annual search for the perfect escort to the Sadie Hawkins dance sponsored by Girls' League.

The small gym, transformed into a replica of Dog Patch, U.S.A. was filled with the aromas of fresh daisies, hot buttered popcorn and newly baled hay. Attractions such as a romantic hay ride, a hoosegow for rowdy country bumpkins and a shotgun wedding service for those unlucky Abners who were nabbed by Daisy Maes added to the frivolity. Delicacies like Mammy Yokum's ripe 'n ready apples sufferin' sucatash sodas, and Jubilation T. Cornpone's cotton candy were vended by various school organizations.

A new twist added this year by Girls' League was the switch from a band to a disco unit and D.J. Mark Martinez. The change was well received by the crowds as vivacious dancers had an excellent selection of top-40 hits and non-stop action.

Girls' League representatives and a boy from each grade level were chosen as candidates for the annual Li'l Abner and Daisy Mae contest. The couple who had collected the most cash in a week's time was awarded the honors while the contributions went to assist the Girls' League's scholarship fund.

From May 8 to 12, hordes of students, teachers, and guests clamored to the 7th Annual Art Show. They came at all times of the school day to gaze at the walls gilded with mirror perspectives, paintings, hooked rugs and drawings. Jewelry and anatomical sculptures set on top low tables attracted the avid observer, while wind chimes added a musical touch.

The award-winning works captivated the interest of all, but the applause heightened on the night of May 11 when trophies were presented to beaming recipients. Eddie Noreiga reaped the highest honors by winning the "Best of the Show" for the fine arts section, the vote of art students for the "Student Award," the $100.00 Schurr "Outstanding Artist Award," and the Soroptomist Club's "Evelyn White Memorial Award," also worth $100.00.

All Humanities students researched the magnate William Randolph Hearst and his ornate castle, but only sixty-five of the students actually clicked their heels upon the gold-embedded floor, laughed in Hearst's home movie theatre, watching Charlie Chaplin play tennis, and gaped at themselves in an indoor reflecting pool. Outside the castle, students precariously edged near a gigantic crystal-clear pool whose depth appeared less than its true fifteen feet.

With the help of sponsors Mr. Smith and Mr. Raisner, the cost of the two day trip for each student was reduced by hustling raffle tickets. Since the $1,600 raised went toward food and bus transportation expenses, the students spent a majority of their travel money for the extras: An expensive Saturday breakfast at the Madonna Inn in San Luis Obispo and later a sweet lunch at Solvang, the Danish village teeming with pastry shops. Since Solvang was the last stop on the return trip home, many gallivanted to the nearby Gannev Ranch of Arabian horses while others, like typical tourists, rushed into Solvang's numerous gift shops in search of souvenirs to remind them of their multi-eventful trip to San Simeon.

Trekkers Get Sierras on High

For thirty-nine Spartans the week of March 12 to March 17th was an exciting and enlightening experience. Students ranging from sophomores to seniors joined forces to represent Schurr High in the vast wilderness of Yosemite National Park.

Arriving Sunday afternoon via Greyhound bus, the students, anxious to explore their unfamiliar surroundings, dispersed with friends to check out the facilities.

Two main areas were visited: the glacier-formed Yosemite Valley and the snow-covered terrain of Crane Flat. In the valley, daily hikes were taken to such places as Columbia Point, where a panorama of the valley could be obtained; Mirror Lake, also known as an artist's haven due to its breathtaking beauty, and the world famous Yosemite Falls. At Crane Flat, cross-country skiing was taken up by novices as well as experienced skiers. Also, a moonlit hike was taken by those more adventurous trekkers.

The valley's history was explored through exhibits depicting the formation of the valley, documents declaring it a national park and other memorabilia which enticed the Spartans to explore the visitor's center frequently.

When President Teddy Roosevelt declared Yosemite a national park, the park's main purpose was recreation and preservation for future generations. Now, however, the park is faced with growing problems such as over-capacity crowds during the summer months, noise and air pollution and commercialization. During the week students, along with park-employed instructors, talked about these problems and possible solutions.

Happy Days Are Here Again

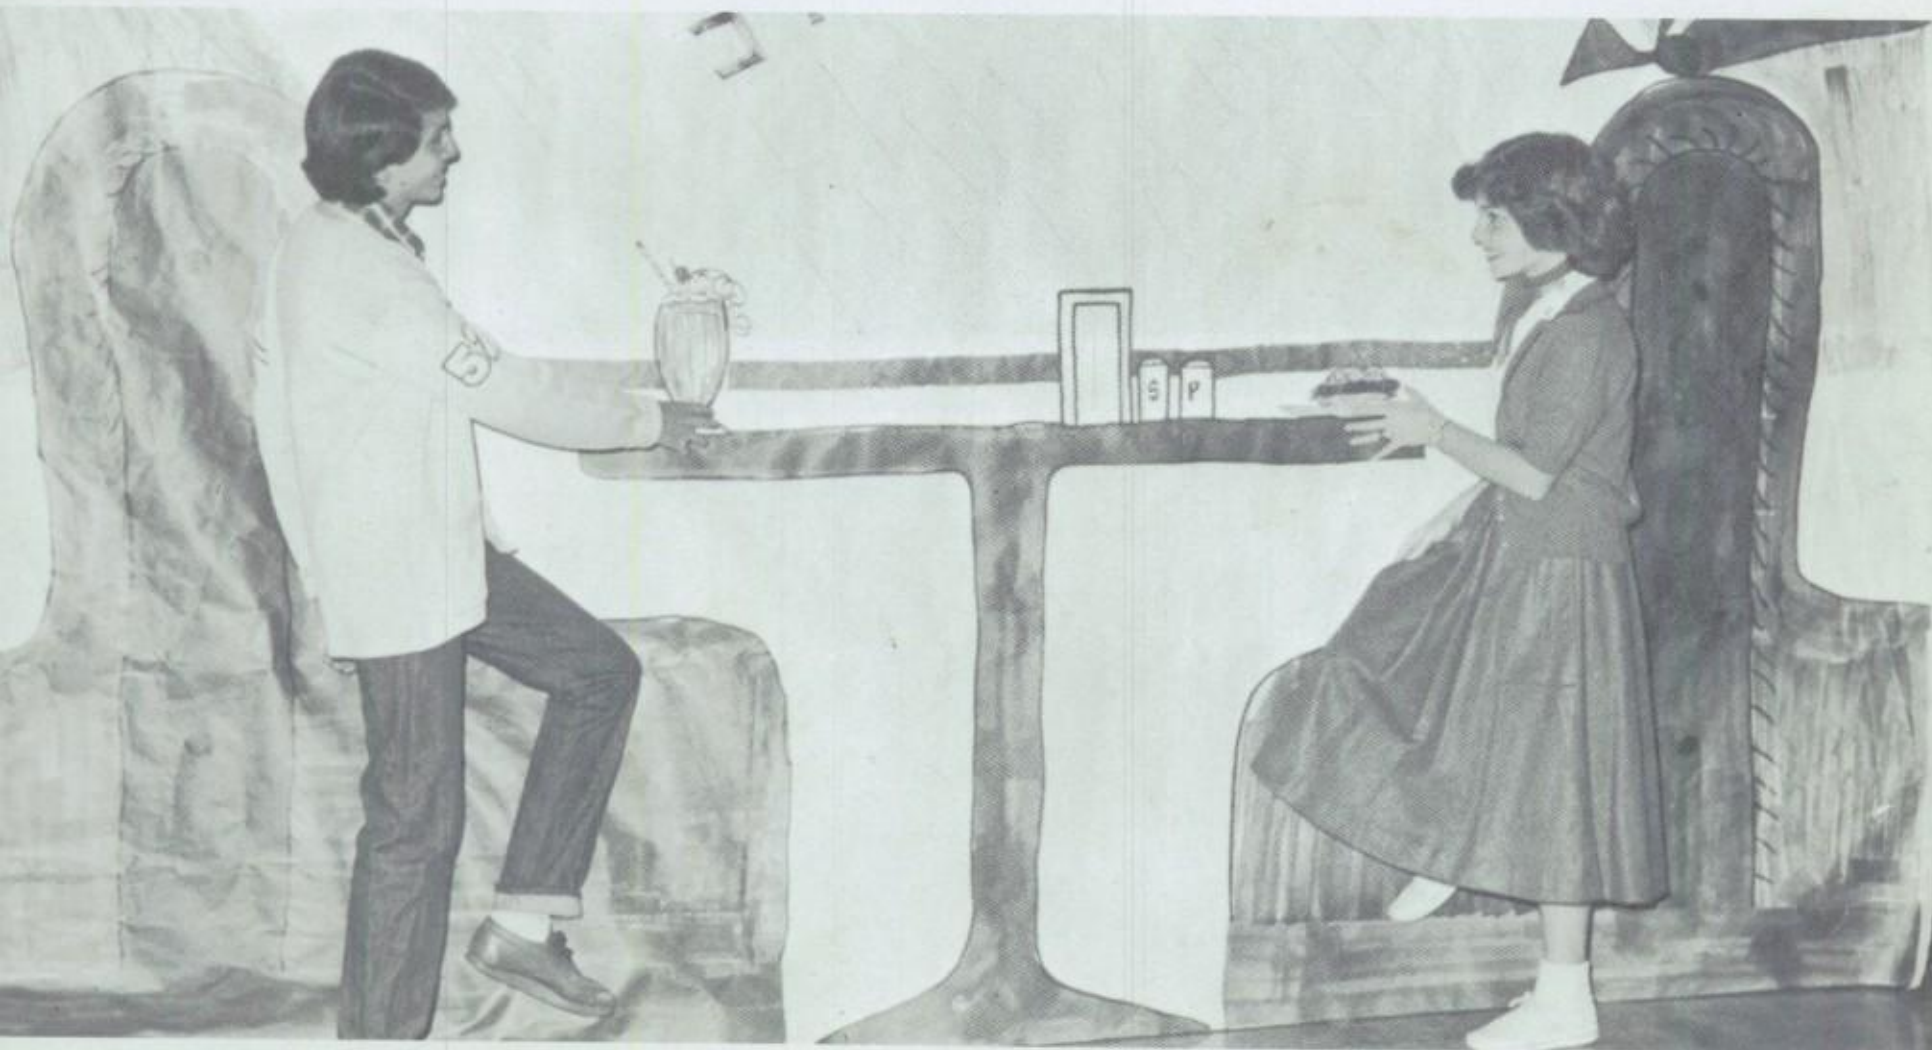

To the delight of many a Bee-bopper came the annual 50's Dance. Fonzie's, Lavernes, Betty and Bud Andersons all strolled into the big gym to indulge in a night of nostalgic fun.

Schurr's Malt Shop, fervently run by Pep Commission sock-hoppers, offered frosty root beer floats and scrumptious banana splits which were devoured cheek-to-cheek by many a couple. Another site popular with the dating crowd was the moonlit "Inspiration Point" where, for just a pittance, Spartans could take their honeypies for a nostalgic walk down memory lane.

Highlighting the festivities were such oldie-but-goodie contests as goldfish swallowing, hoola-hooping, bubble gum blowing, and Volkswagen stuffing.

Other golden oldies were provided by "Wing Tips" whose music inspired twisters, jitterbugs and bunny-hoppers to rock around the clock.

Pictures posed in a Classic Olds convertible, Circa 1950, were taken by Gigi Mui so students could always relish the night of fantasy and fun.

Looking Out for Number One

Having always prided itself on the academic and leadership achievements of its students, Schurr gladly honored those students who have shown outstanding qualities in these fields.

One such honor, the "Bank of America Award," spotlighted seniors whose scholastic attainment, sense of responsibility, and evidence of leadership gave most promise of future success and service to society. The plaque awards this year went to Wayne Ung, Science and Mathematics; Jon Wada, Liberal Arts; Joanne Yorba, Fine Arts; Sandra Simcoe, Vocational Arts.

In another facet of recognition, the selection of Schurr's representatives to Girls' and Boys' State, Stacey Honda and Charlie Pecot were the two juniors who had shown strong abilities in student government. These two recipients will journey to Sacramento in July for a week to participate in a simulated government environment and to tour the state capitol along with representatives from other schools.

Topping all other awards, perhaps, was the title of Valedictorian. Obtaining a perfect 4.0 grade average from the sophomore until senior year is quite an accomplishment, but the ten seniors who headed their class at graduation this year were highly involved in school life as well. Heading the class of '78 were Anna Avetisian, Adrienne Bon, Baldwin Quan, Lei Tanpuye, Wayne Ung, Jon Wada, Lynne Woo, Alice Wong, David Yoshida and Eugene Toy.

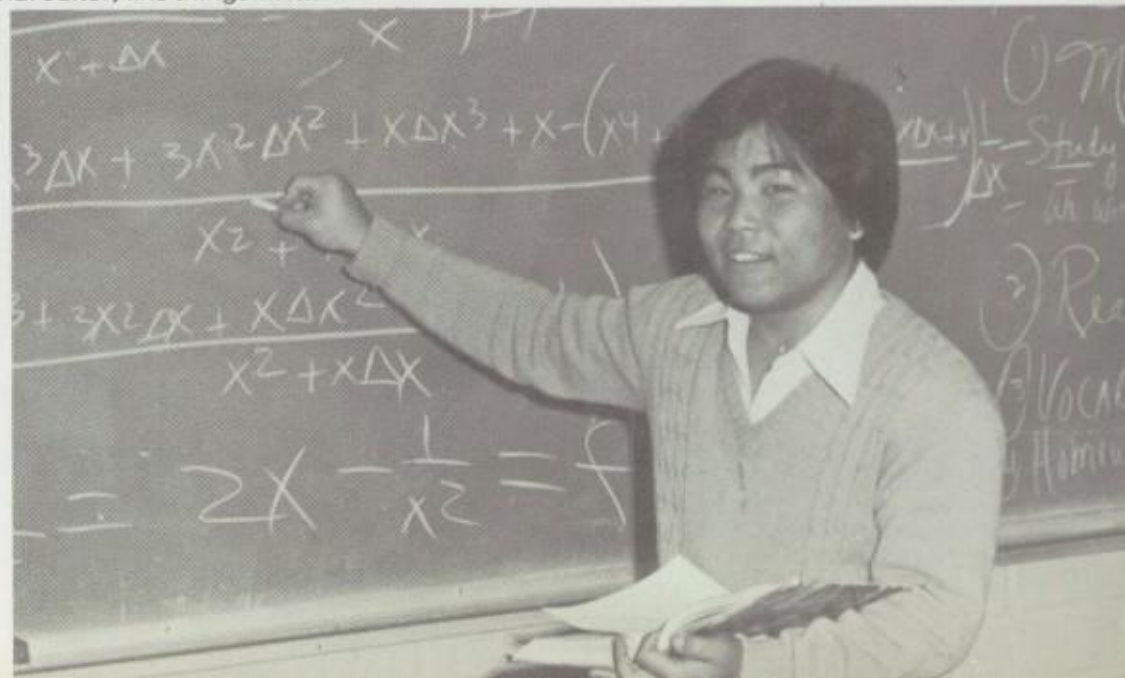

A secretary's work seems never done as Sandra Simcoe perfects her skills in her outstanding field.

A stickler for details, Wayne Ung won't be satisfied until he can grapple that equation in record time.

Leading out in front, Charlie Pecot is always one step ahead in all school activities.

Leadership and responsibility are two of Stacey Honda's qualities that led her to her post as junior class vice-president; here she helps Debbie Lee, Suzette Horikiri and Chris Robinson make plans for the Jr./Sr. basketball game.

Equal as well as conscientious are the 1978 valedictorians Adrienne Bon, David Yosida, Anna Avetisian, Joe Chow, Alice Wong, Lynne Woo, Wayne Ung, and Wada.

Dating Fever Overcomes Spartan Singles

To help us explore Close Encounters of the Dating Kind are the ever-popular Sammy and Sandy Spartan. Though their dates may range from attending a ballet and dining on Lobster Thermador to exploring neighborhood libraries, our couple cherished time spent along experiencing new adventures.

Sammy and Sandy often ventured to Westwood, the trendy capitol of the cinema scene, to see first-run movies like the fast-stepping "Saturday Night Fever." or, if the couple wanted to be alone the Starlight Drive-in was a nice setting for a little innocent fun.

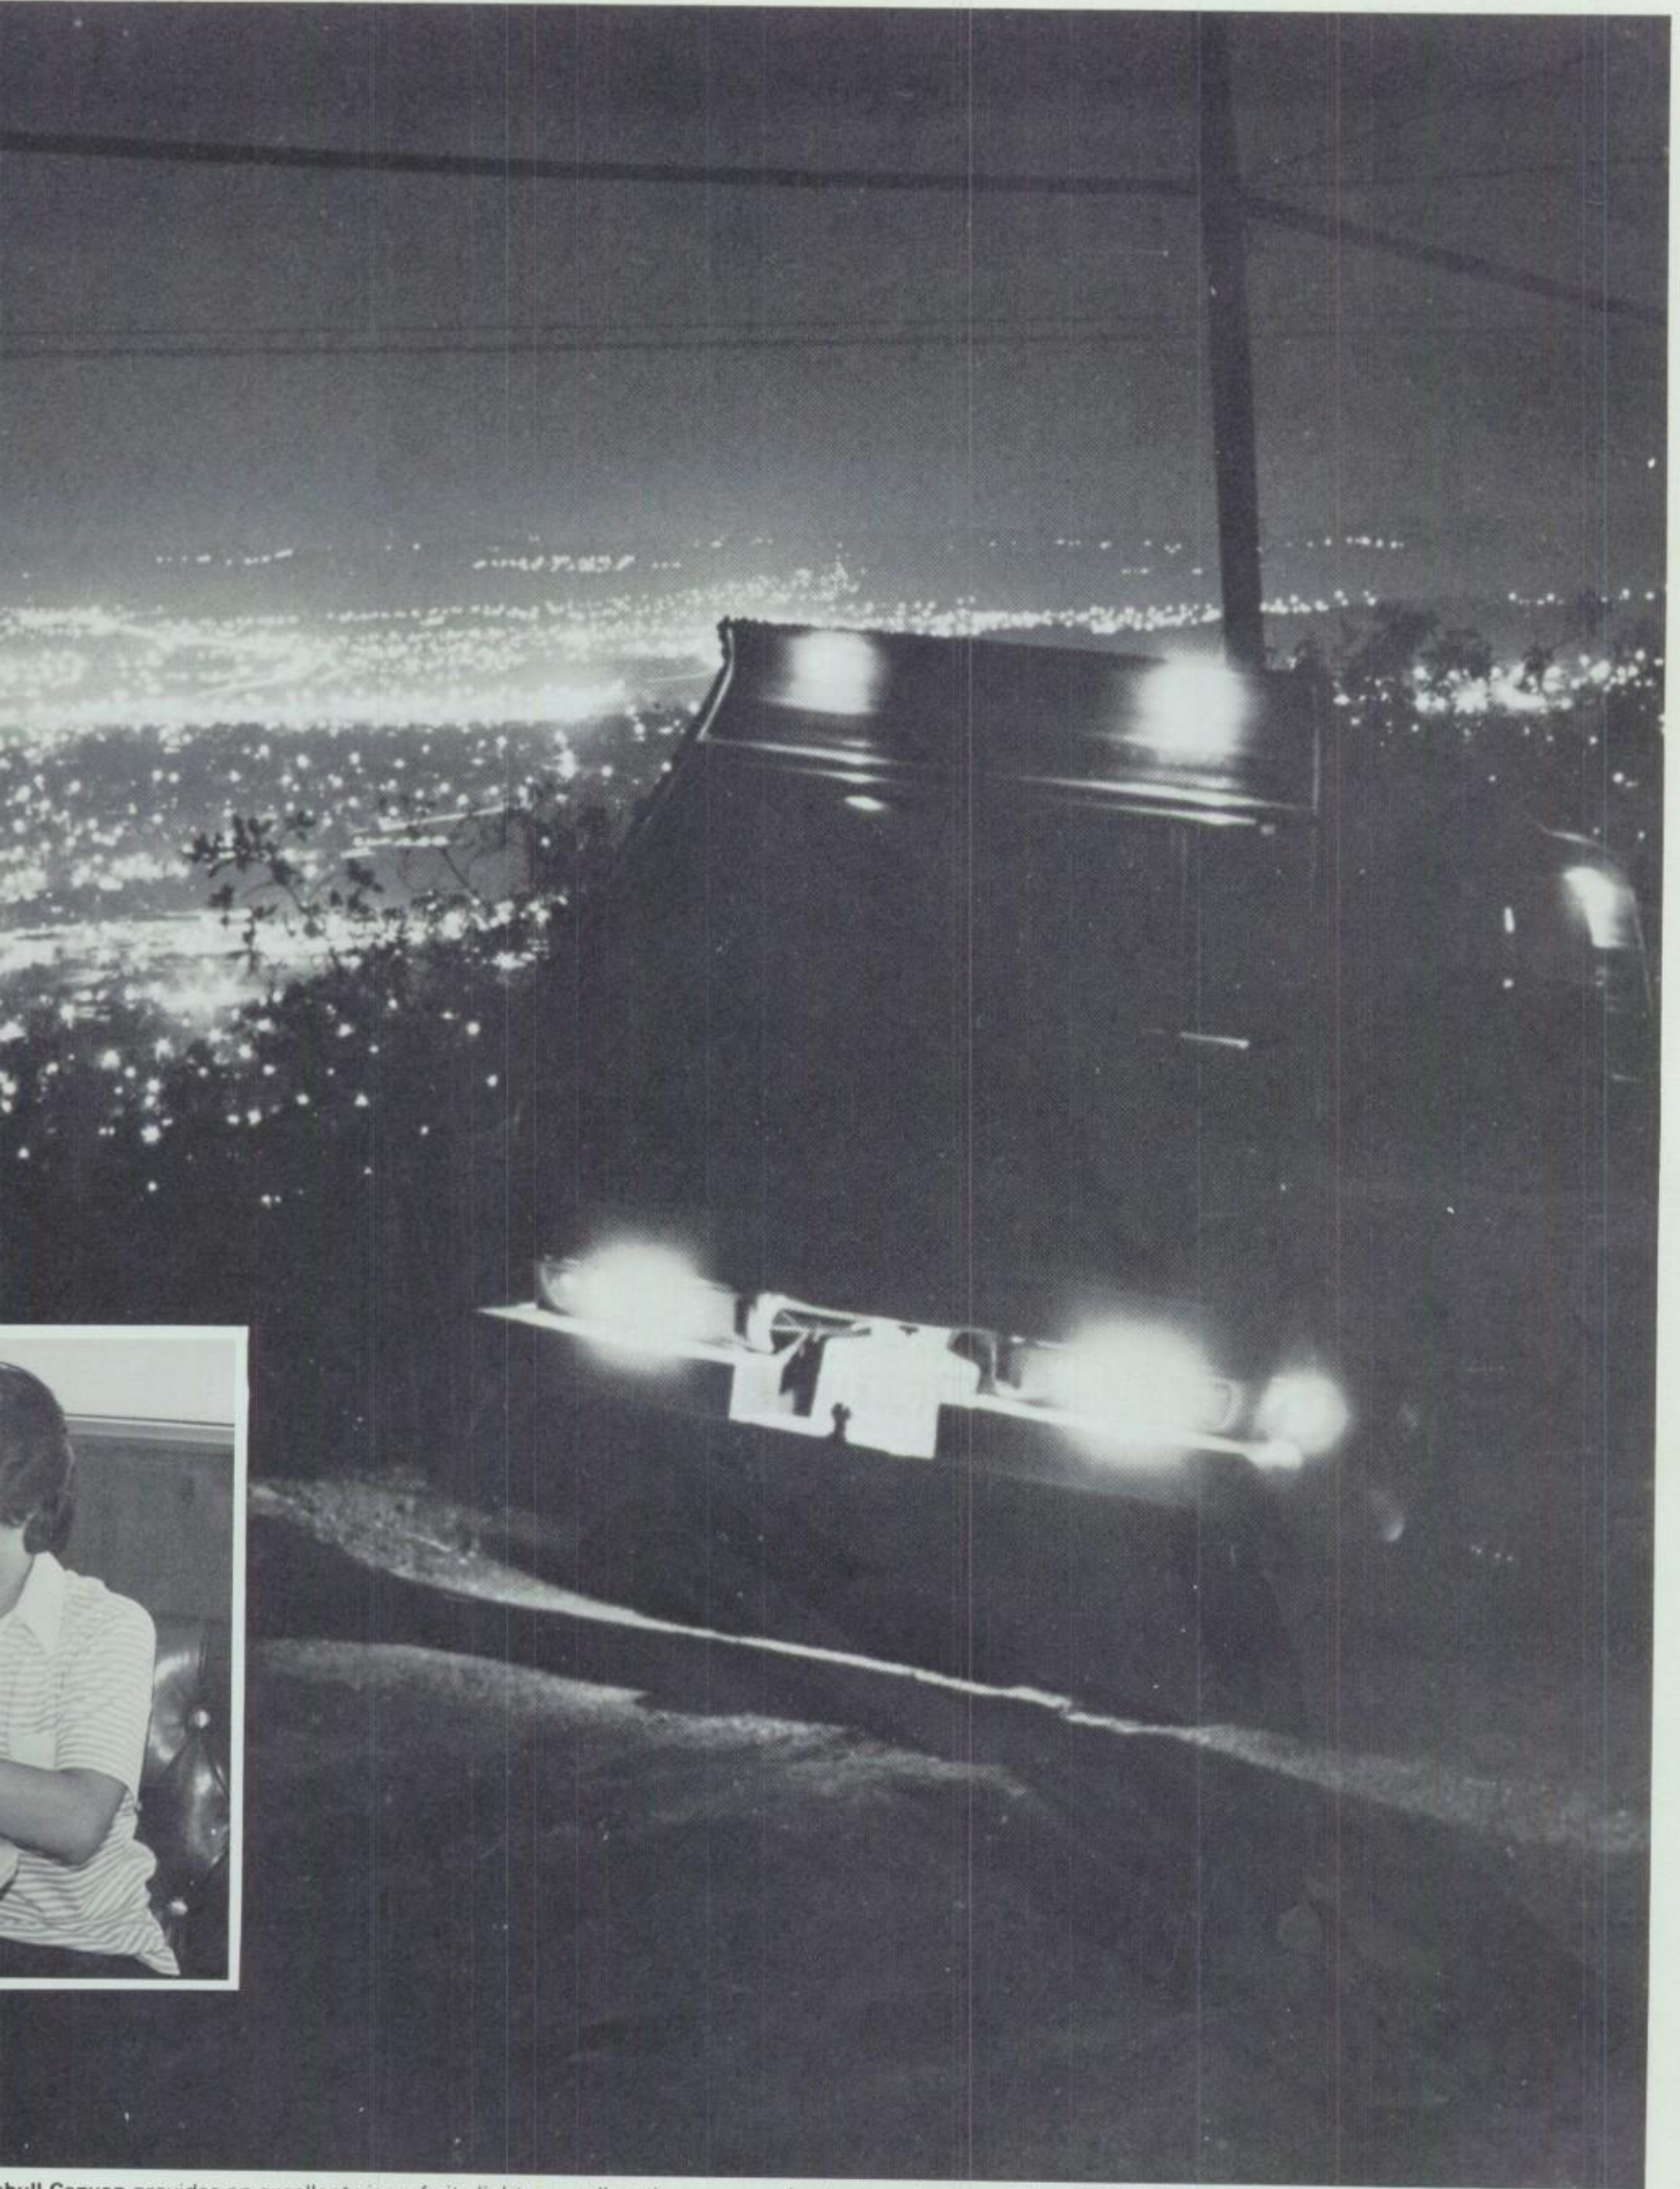

On other occasions, Sammy and Sandy attended parties where lively music, provided by a family stereo, gave them a chance to practice their latest dance steps. When those steps were perfected, discos like "Gatsby's" in El Sereno offered them a chance to display their talents.

Moreover, music provided by bands like "Sting," "Nice & Easy," and "Carry on," set the tone for the couple's first date, the Christmas Ball, a knee-slapping hoe-down date, the Sadie Hawkins Dance, and the ultimate date, the Prom.

An amour-break is an opportune time for Cesar Gerardo and Erma Torres to discuss plans for their Saturday night rendezvous

Blossoming Romance Ends Union Fight

The story of a union's fight for higher wages may not seem the sort of stuff musicals are made of, but somehow "The Pajama Game," mixed politics as well as love into a delightful tale of life in a pajama factory.

The play unfolded as the new superintendent of the Sleep Tite P.J. factory, Sid Sorokin, played by Todd Spitzer, met and fell in love with the head of the grievance committee, Babe Williams, portrayed by Angela Houston.

Babe, along with co-workers Hines, the overly jealous ex-vau-devillian knife-thrower, played with a comical flare by Tom Couch and his fickle and flirtatious girlfriend Gladys, hoofed out by Joanne Yorba, joined forces to fight for their 7½ cent raise which had already been entered into the cost by the villainous yet, laughable boss, Hassler, acted out by Danny Gallegos.

Adding to the extravaganza of song and dance were Judy Gargalione as Mabel, the matronly and meddling secretary; John Walker as Prez, the girl-crazy pursuer who was, in turn, pursued by Mae, the "pleasantly plump" beer guzzler played by Leigh Sklamberg.

The play which opened to jubilant crowds, was filled with lots of good ol' fashioned soft shoe and tap dancing. Such classic musical comedy numbers as "Steam Heat" and "Hernando's Hideaway" along with romantic favorites like "Hey There" and "There Once was a Man" were given new flare by choreographer Victoria Patterson.

Director David Lebow and Student-Director John Walker along with the stage crew spent many hard months designing and building the sets which were well appreciated by the vivacious crowds. By the time the show had come to a close, with labor as well as love disputes settled, the cast as well as the audiences knew that nothing's quite the same as "The Pajama Game."

As dusk fell upon the L.A. skyline, sleek and shiny cars began to fill the parking lot of the Proud Bird, site of the 1978 Junior-Senior Prom. Emerging from these cars were not loud, jean-clad teenagers, but sophisticated, elegantly dressed young adults. Entering the lobby of the grand ballroom, couples "oohed" and "ahed" at the beautiful decor of the premises.

A gourmet dinner was enjoyed as "Private Collection" provided mellow music to set the mood for the evening. Following dinner, the dance floor filled instantly as "Nice 'N Easy" struck up with "Boogie Nights."

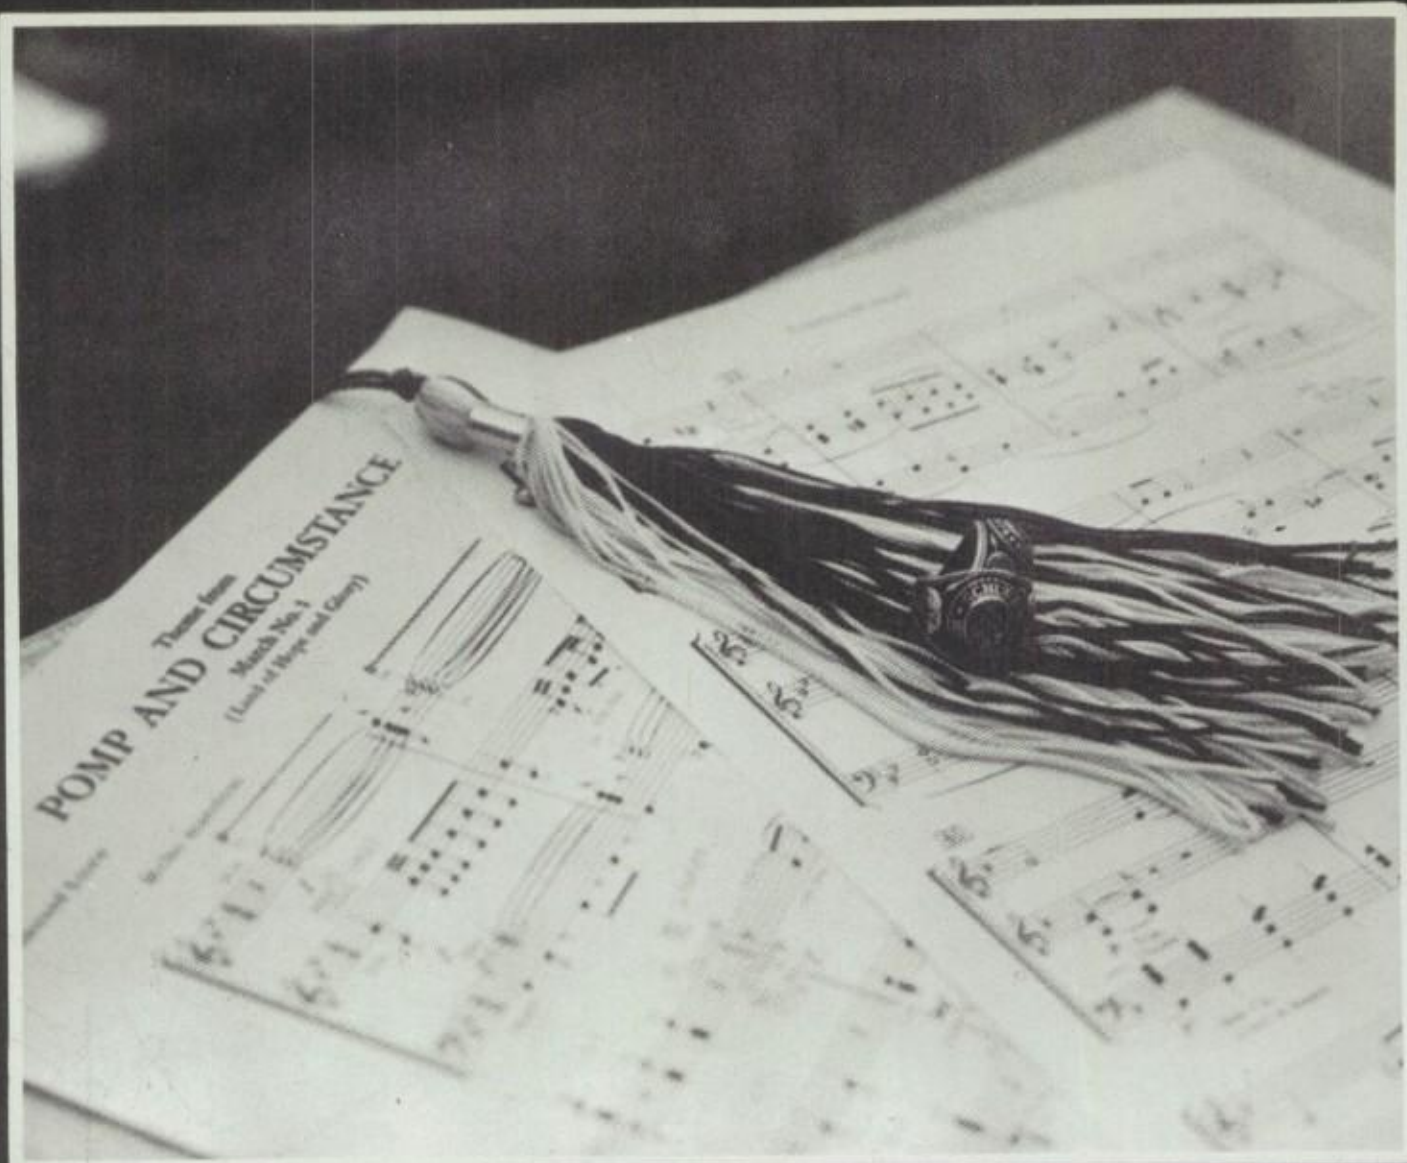

Hosting the gala affair was the Junior class, headed by Debbie Lee and Lori Murakami. Their many months of preparation were clearly appreciated as couples danced cheek to cheek to the romantic theme "One Day In Your Life."

U.S.B. President: Scott Shimamoto

"Saturday Night Fever" came one night earlier when the U.S.B. sponsored their March Dimes Dance, Friday night March 10th

Mellow sounds of "Nice and Easy" echoed throughout the walls of the small gym at the football homecoming dance sponsored by U.S.B., providing Schurr students with a fun-filled night of dance.

But dances weren't all the United Student Body government devoted its time to, for together with Interact they sponsored a Christmas canned food drive that provided needy families of Montebello and Monterey Park with a variety of wholesome food. Collecting over 4,700 cans, breaking last year's record of 3,300, proved that U.S.B. wasn't only a group that could govern, but one with great compassion as well. Attesting to this was the benefit dance of March 10, sponsored by U.S.B. in which $1,060.00 was raised for the March of Dimes.

Keeping the campus spotless was the objective of the Clean Campus Drive and the promise of a free dance motivated the student body immensely.

Meetings for the Student Congress under the leadership of President Scott Shimamoto, and advised by Mr. Malcolm Lincoln and Mr. Gene Goebel, met bi-weekly. At the meetings, home-room representatives expressed new ideas and feelings for or against controversial subjects. One problem that the congress worked on all year was to revise Schurr's constitution.

The U.S.B. ended its full agenda with a twist by reviving the days of bobby socks and slick-backed hair-dos with the jitterbugging 50's Dance in May.

Applying their well-developed writing skills to each and every article, the Spartan Scroll staff continued to keep their readers well informed throughout its fifteen issues. Whether a student wished to increase his knowledge of U.S.B. government, sports, or school events, he or she could look in the Scroll for information on the subjects.

Action-packed by each page-editor and his staff, the once-white newsprint was filled bi-weekly under the aegis of Editor-in-Chief Eugene Toy and advisor Ms. Ella Wing.

When February 25th rolled around, journalism staff members were involved in the East Los Angeles Journalism Education Association's write-off competition where they were judged in on-the-spot writing.

San Diego was the destination for the staffers in April as they traveled to the Southern California Journalism Education Association's annual West Coast convention. Here members engaged in various workshops to improve their transcripts and compete in writing categories such as sports, news, features, and editorials.

To improve the appearance of the newspaper, two new concepts were applied: the paper, type was altered to off-set print and a better quality paper was incorporated.

Fun-d Filled Year for Scholars

"Sink the Vikings" was the theme of the '77 C.S.F. Homecoming float, a sturdy boat that took second prize in the float competition. Spirit Day also began the first of the many fundraisers when they peddled orange drinks to the carnival-goers.

Red and white striped candy canes initiated the holiday season and proved to be a fruitful sale, along with the stuffed Santa sale. Hand crafted by C.S.F. members, yarn Santas could be purchased for delivery to a close friend. The month of December not only reflected the holiday spirit of the Spartan scholars, but their thoughtfulness for others when their songs echoed through the quiet corridors of Montebello convalescent homes. The group vocalized their brotherhood beneficence by singing carols for the homes' residents. Visiting and taking the time to talk, brought joy to the residents who enjoyed the club's thoughtfulness.

Nestle's candy bars, bake sales, and the vending of a Valentine carnation for sweethearts were organized as fundraisers. President Eileen Fitzpatrick kept the club's schedule well-packed with a fun day at an amusement park for Recognition Day and Braintrusters, a competition against top students of other schools for the district championship. Representatives from the class of '80, '79, and '78 for the contest were respectively, Carolyn Saisho, Stella Quan, and Eugene Toy. Mr. Andrew Sais advised the group towards a smooth running, successful, and busy year.

Magicians Pull Money From Hat for A.S.I.A.

Asians unite at a weekly meeting to discuss upcoming events and fundraisers

Starting off in poverty but converting to riches, the A.S.I.A. Club, headed by President Russ Matsuda and advised by Mr. Glen Sewell, began their rags-to-riches transformation on Spirit Day. By making a generous profit of $80.00 selling delectable won tons, the club made both themselves and students look back upon Spirit Day more favorably.

While October brought won ton eating, February brought sorcery and enchantment to the A.S.I.A. Club's Magic Show.

Being an even greater success than the won ton sale, $150.00 was brought into the A.S.I.A. Club's coffer from the Magic Show.

Aside from raising money and providing fun for others, the A.S.I.A. Club also attended to its own amusements by visiting the snow-capped mountains of Mammoth. Traveling by rented bus, the A.S.I.A. Club romped among the snowy mountains snowball fighting and skiing.

Top-Notch Literature Enriches "Oracle"

Once again minds exploded with the combustible contents of the annual literary magazine. Brimming full of poems, prose, artwork, and photographs by Schurr students and even teachers, the '78 edition of the Oracle, "Endless Horizon" hypnotized readers into the realms of love, sadness, joy, and make-believe.

Because selecting those poems and stories qualifying for publication was a time-consuming task, Oracle staffers frequently toted packets of the literary works home for more in-depth evaluation and judging.

Fundraising to support the Oracle's publication was the main purpose of the Oracle Club; Spook-o-grams, Holiday grams, and candy were vended by the members of this booster club.

Under the guidance of creative writing teacher, Miss Merlene Hill, the united labors of the Oracle Club and Oracle Staff resulted in a profitable sale in June when the Oracle made its debut. To many, the hunger for a good taste of Schurr's creative talents was satisfyingly appeased.

Humanitarians Get Involved in Campus Life

Spooks were even spookier than last year in the Campus Life's Haunted House where the dark hallways and brightly flashing strobe lights prevented victims from seeing the scary devils waiting to frighten them. Members also had the opportunity to stage folk singers, hear interesting speakers, and present a film, "Fat City," in which greed's consequences were revealed.

Some of the club's thirty members challenged themselves by towering a mountain, while others backpacked in the San Bernardino Mountains totting a 40-pound backpack.

"Mainly the group was brought together to relate to students and their problems concerning all matters," states Advisor Larry Jones.

"There's space for everyone in P.T.S.A." was the theme of this year's Schurr High's Parent-Teacher-Student Association and a total enrollment of 875 members reflected the positive response of the P.T.S.A.'s appeal.

To promote the welfare of children and adequate laws for the care and protection of youth, as well as a closer relationship between home and school were just some of the goals of the 1977-1978 P.T.S.A.

In February two Honorary Service Awards and one Continuing Service Award was presented at the "Dinner is Served," Founder's Day and scholarship benefit.

"Around the World With P.T.A.," was the theme for the Teriyaki Chicken Dinner held in the cafeteria prior to the Annual Art Show and Open House in April.

Serving as president this year was Mrs. Bethel Webster.

Spartans' Vivacious Expressions Overflow With Merit

The '77-'78 Speech Team, under the aegis of Mr. Marty Flinn, began its arduous tournament season by attending a Southern California Debate League clinic at Rio Hondo College. There, the six active members endeavored to master the fine art of communication. Taking high honors was Todd Spitzer who received 1st place at the Southern California Debate League Tournament as well as a certificate of superiority in extemporaneous speaking. Equally ranked was Eileen Fitzpatrick who placed 1st in original advocacy at the State Qualifications.

The precision-oriented Modern Dance Club led by Mrs. Nadine Carruthers concentrated solely on preparing for their elegant performance at the Spring Concert in May. Meeting in the big gym daily, the dancers auditioned for spots in the concert program, using such vibrant music as "Close Encounters" and "Saturday Night Fever."

Ambitious Volunteers Devote Time to Student Service

Ready and willing, involved students contributed to formulate two very energetic volunteer service clubs.

With the turn of a switch the Stage Crew team became animated and started work on their chief duties: the modification of play sets and the setting-up and running of the light fixtures for the plays "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Pajama Game." In addition, to these jobs the Stage Crew set the lights for the "Battle of the Bands" and assembled bleachers for the choir's performances at Macy and Eastmont Intermediate Schools. The Stage Crew's very illustrious and active director Mr. David Lebow was supported by senior John Walker as crew chief.

Independently, the Fire and Safety club based their concerns on "Fireproofing" the school. Some of their preventative measures were to routinely check fire extinguishers and to enact practice fire drills.

Behind Closed Doors

Few outsiders had the opportunity to explore the innersanctum of room B15 during fifth period. But those who did found diligent, talented students directing their efforts into the production of Spectrum '78.

Besides the custom of confidentiality, tradition pervaded as the staff changed rooms for the second time in as many years. Adjusting to its new facility, equipped with two separate workrooms, the staff jumped right into the swing of things. In September, the staff's first priority was to create this year's theme and book cover. Brainstorming enabled them to choose the

"Join the Crowd" theme, while several Spartan artists contributed to the designing of the cover's spectacular gold medallion. Individual sections then plunged into action to develop a unique style suitable for pleasing the student body. With each monthly deadline, frustration, anger and apprehension crept into the tired minds of the staffers who fortunately found relief the day proofs were delivered.

In April, the staff, accompanied by several pre-annual class staffers and advisor Ms. Joy Cimarusti joined in the annual West Coast Journalism-Yearbook N.S.P.A./J.E.A. Conference held in San Diego. There the team competed in yearbook contests and workshops as well as touring such sites as Sea World, San Diego Zoo and the early Spanish culture of Old Towne.

Assisting in the organizing of ring sales, annual sales, and special events were the industrious Finance Office workers. Their daily tasks, both mathematical and physical, were confronted each day with near-perfection.

Even though Pee-Chee folders, papers, and writing implements could be located at the nearest Lucky market, for convenience and forgetful students, school supplies could also be found in the student store. Student Store workers not only supplied school necessities, but also offered a wide selection of candies to anyone with a sweet tooth.

Just a floor below, stacking and filing by the Library Staff led to the speedy arrangement of the books giving librarians more time to answer questions of bewildered readers. The process of checking out books ran smoothly and more systematically, because of the extra helping hands.

While books were provided to students by the Library Staff, lunchtime music as well as the sound system for school plays were provided by the Sound Crew who sometimes gave up their personal time for the enjoyment of others.

Whether a student had a job at Burger King, Boy's Market, or Thom McAnn's, five semester graduation credits could be obtained. Signing up in the Career Guidance Center and attending to the related instruction which accompanied 180 hours of work, were needed to fulfill Work Experience requirements. But, if a student didn't have a job, the bulletin board outside the Career Center posted a variety of jobs which suited many money-cravers. Rarely did Mr.

Walter Witt, the program's supervisor, not have an answer to questioning students.

The Regional Occupational Program was also the place to go for the student wanting to become exposed to job environments or preparing for a future occupation. R.O.P. was a two-period class offering an assortment of training possibilities such as shoe salesman, medical assistant, and cosmetologist. Confused job-hunting minds were often straightened out by Mr. Gus Seymer, R.O.P.'s advisor.

Work Experience as well as R.O.P. students were required to take the Armed Services Aptitude Battery Test which indicated students' potential within the military services.

Strategy and concentration are a must when these teams play tournaments against each other and other high schools in the Valley League.

The twelve members of Chess Club compete amongst themselves for the top four seats which make up the Varsity team. The rest are placed as J.V. chess players. The typical Spartan chess player has an active mind and usually gets good grades in all classes. Mr. Malcolm Lincoln, the club's coach and backbone, enjoyed playing chess too, because he loves good competition just as the team does.

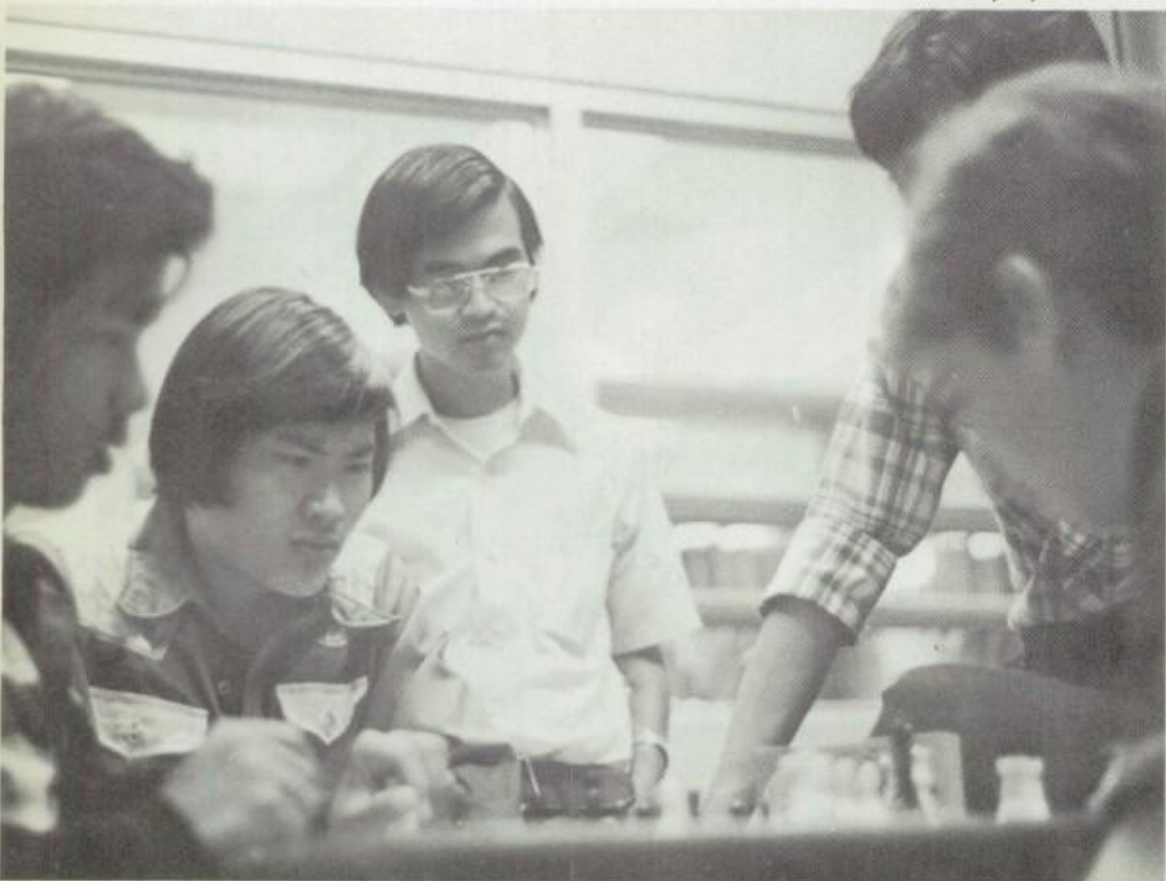

Backgammon, a game not recognized by many but one that has been around for centuries, has securely established itself at Schurr.

Unlike chess, backgammon involves a little bit of luck as well as skill. The luck comes from the two dice while the skill is in the mind of the player.

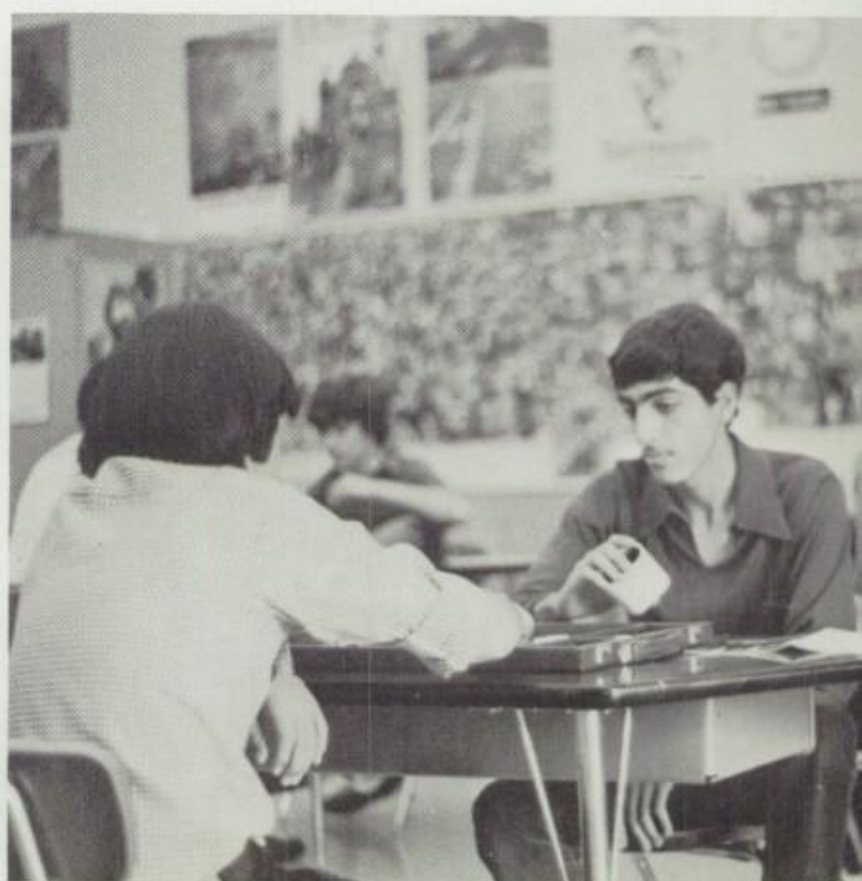

Competition in Backgammon Club was not only among students; Jean Jeffers and club sponsor Charles Zoolalian challenged each other to a backgammon duel every Wednesday.

Determining each intricate movement in his mind first, made Joe Iletto one of the top varsity chess players

Contemplating his next move, Joe Chow carefully studies his chessmen as his opponent and others scan for pointers

Spartan Swoopers Glide Down Mountains

Swooping down snow-capped mountains with pro-like skill or just plain guts, the bold members of the Ski Club revealed hidden talents not visible on campus.

Visiting the powdered slopes of Wrightwood, where Mr. Jim Haskins' ski shack provided a recovery room, and Mammoth, visited during Easter vacation, novice skiers gained much-needed experience while veteran skiers gained practice.

The more positive-thinking Spartan invested in skies while those not so optimistic rented equipment.

Advisors, Mr. Jim Haskins and Mr. Glen Sewell provided transportation for Spartan skiers. Also, Mr. Steve Terry, Ms. Linda Fastinos, Mr. Mando Marentes, and Mr. Tommy Thompson furnished students' rides to the icy mountains.

Spirit Train Got Cheerleaders on the Right Track

Supporting the varsity teams with their chants and cheers was just one part of being a cheerleader. Pep rallies were stirred with the vivacious yells, skits, and special routines performed by the Varsity Cheerleaders who captured their audience's attention.

Traveling by Amtrak train to the San Diego State University Campus to attend the United Spirit Association Camp proved valid as the pepsters received several ribbons in excellence, creativity, superiority, spirit, and sportsmanship. The Superior Trophy, the highest award, was presented to the yell leaders after the completion of the camp's competition.

Ribbons, buttons, and key chain sales were all a part of the fund raising activities of the pepsters, which provided the income for their many gracious treats and flowers for the athletes of Schurr.

Memories of '78

The heat of summer brings us out,
We practice hard to scream and shout,
We're crazy, you might say we're nuts,
With spirit and spunk we do our stuff,
Green, white and gold our colors shine,
Worn with the pride we feel inside,
Megaphones, pom poms, pep rallies, games,
We cheer our teams to victory and fame,
But now it's time for us to show
That though we're sad, it's time to go,
With the tears and joys of victories,
Friendships, laughter, and memories,
We're proud to be the Varsity of '78,
Never was a year so great.

Doubling its ranks this year, Interact moved with greater strength and vitality. True to its name, the group labored jointly with other organizations in formulating common goals. Sponsors Mr. Glen Sewell and Steve Terry helped Interact members create, along with S Club, a third place homecoming float. Plaudits were also earned by the U.S.B. in collecting canned food for the needy during the Christmas season. With the extra manpower of the Rotary Club behind them, club members painted senior citizens' homes as well as scoured the city streets in the "Clean Sweep" program.

Combining service with fun, the Varsity Club's appetite for good times compelled them to replenish their treasury for fun-time expenses. Operating the dunking booth on Spirit Day proved to be such a bankable success that Sponsor Mr. Casey O'Gorman rented out the contraption to other schools for a $25 fee. By raffling ten "Earth, Wind, and Fire" concert tickets for a mere 50¢, the club netted not only profits, but recognition for the unusual, yet effective fundraiser.

Although trips to ski slopes and Magic Mountain kept the athletic members moving, the Donkey Basketball Game gave them the best combination of frolic and exercise.

Although not sexist in philosophy, being a girl was a requirement for S Club membership.

Led by President Cindy Luck and Vice-President Shari Gong, S Club members entered a tree decorating contest held at Whittier Park. By capturing third place, the club boosted their funds with the $50 prize.

Most of the approximately forty members, plus Mrs. Keseloff, thought that "Secret Sisters" was what made S Club special. They exchanged presents, not knowing whom they received them from. Only at the end of the year did they find out who their benevolent gift-giver was.

Silver Bells Ring Out Greetings

Transformed by energetic Girls' League members from beast to beauty, the big gym, decorated in yuletide colors of red and green, was the setting for the sixth annual Christmas Ball, "Silver Bells."

But even before Christmas the busy gals were spreading holiday spirit: cuddly Snoopys and grasping koala bears were "adopted" by eager Spartans who sought that "perfect" gift for a special friend.

Friends were also fondly remembered by students who cared enough to send a Girls' League mum at Homecoming or a Val-O-Gram greeting at Valentine Day. The real test of friendship, however, came at the Sadie Hawkins' Dance when Spartans, taking a down-home trip through Dogpatch, got themselves "hitched" or thrown in the "hoosegow" until a merciful

Psyched Up Gridders Reveal Pepsters' Power

Consisting of one junior and five sophomores, the J.V. Pepsters, led by Ms. Suzanne Hyllested and Captain Debbie Kelman, really magnetized their audience. The pepsters, showing their harmonious routines, received a trophy for excellent performance at the United Association Cheerleading camp in San Diego. This group worked hard after school and during the summer perfecting cheers learned at camp along with composition. The J.V. Cheerleaders were a great asset to the J.V. team to whom they gave self assurance and the power to win.

To help the Varsity Cheerleaders get their audience excited, moving, and cheering, whether at a pep rally or at a game, was the 1977-78 Pep Squad! This group of fifty-three lively girls assisted by Captain Virgie Gonzales, got everyone into the "spirit" of things by leading hand routines or just by their consistency to get the crowd aroused.

Excellence Gets Awards; Awards Are What They Got

Explosive, exciting, and ready for action were the Class of '81 Freshman Cheerleaders! Not just another group of frosh pepsters, the freshman cheerleaders, headed by Captain Linda Arredondo, and supervised by Ms. Suzanne Hyllested, gave the freshman football team the spirit and confidence they needed to obtain their strong 4-1 record. Adding to the freshman pepster squad's qualities was the thoughtfulness put into sending a boutonniere to each member of the frosh football team on game day.

Being the first of freshman cheerleaders allowed to help the Varsity, J.V., and Sophomore Cheerleaders sell victory ribbons, their persuasiveness made them pros at vending.

The sophomore football squad also had an extraordinary group of pepsters to cheer them on to victory. These active pepsters led by Susan Rodarte, and also guided by Ms. Suzanne Hyllested, attended a cheerleading camp in San Diego in which they received ribbons for excellence. They learned many new cheers which showed sparkle and vitality when they performed. The Sophomore Cheerleaders were a great example of good sportsmanship to the sophomore football and basketball teams as well as to their audiences.

Engaging their activities with visits to the local intermediate schools, creating musical productions, and performing in the Christmas and Pops' Concerts were just a few of the events listed on the A Cappella and Vocal Ensemble's busy agenda.

Performances for local clubs and organizations, such as the City of Hope, Beverly Hospital, the Senior Citizens' Christmas party, and a show at Taylor Ranch for its Thursday Morning Club, kept Mr. David Lebow's Vocal Ensemble's schedule pretty well filled.

The production of Mr. Lebow's stage shows, "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Pajama Game," not only got choir voices singing, but kept cast members' feet moving.

With accompanist Ms. Kimberly Holman keeping the beat, events ran smoothly as the choir endeavored to keep their audiences entertained. All in all the year of '78 was a successful one for the A Cappella and Vocal Ensemble who continued to amuse and catch the crowd's attention, wherever and whenever they performed.

Auditions Yield Seventy-five New Voices

Frolicking about to ease their curtain call jitters are members of the Freshman choir

Each May Mr. David Lebow visits Schurr's intermediate feeder schools, Eastmont and Macy, where he auditions every eighth grader, listening for the vocal ability necessary for recruitment into the ninth grade choir.

This year, the Freshman Choir consisted of seventy-five eager students. The young group learned to read music, keep time, and even memorize difficult lyrics. The group proved their merit at their first public appearance in "An Evening of Seasonal Music." They continued to strive for excellence throughout the year; many were cast in the two musicals presented by the Performing Arts Department.

As the year came to an end, each member of the frosh choir faced the dilemma of discontinuing the performing arts program or joining the A Cappella Choir where he could enjoy three more years of singing, acting, and performing.

Posters and Planning Get Students' Approval

Ever wonder where those colorful, vivacious banners atop "C" building popped up from? Production Design is the answer.

In addition to the various banners and posters being produced by the talented class members and Mrs. Joanne Osborne, the group also made gym decorations, took care of the kiosk in the arcade, and designed the big display board inside the library.

The job of planning and organizing such high-spirited events as Schurr High's Homecoming, Spirit Week, and the 50's Dance was given to the Pep Commission, with Commissioner Cathy Kissée leading the group.

Commission members were comprised of club officers and other students wishing to participate in the representation of their school and club.

Suggestions for upcoming events were put into consideration at the infrequent meetings. Unlike other clubs where a set date was planned for each meeting, the Pep Commission met only when it was necessary. With each encounter, members were introduced to good talk and ideas, and later filled their tummies with appetizing refreshments graciously provided by the host.

Bright smiles and pointed toes gave this year's drill team the record for being the highest scoring drill team at Schurr. The squad performed not only at football games and parades, but also at amusement parks. Invited by Magic Mountain and Disneyland they proudly displayed their skill and spent the rest of the evening screaming on the "great white knucklers" and "Space Mountain."

Led by Captain Diane Gomez and assisted by Senior Leader Shirley Cordova, Junior Leader Desiree Rodriguez, and Sophomore Leader Sandy Cordova, the Drill Team was able to grab a coveted first-place at the Hawthorne Parade. They also satisfyingly captured third place at the Azusa Days Parade.

In addition to the drill team leaders above, Sergeant at Arms Ethel Almazan, Assistant Sergeant at Arms Yvonne Murrieta, and Choreographer Adela Galvan and her assistant Laura Lugo also attended drill team camp in Santa Cruz.

Receiving superior ribbons on every routine, the leaders were able to capture a trophy for highest honors establishing them as the best drill team at camp.

Musical Crowd-Getters Spark Boisterous Voices

Drowsy students found themselves being mystically drawn by a mysterious force to the amphitheater on Friday mornings. This electrical force was music, transmitted by the pied pipers of Schurr, the "Mighty Spartan Pep Band."

The spirited '77-'78 Pep Band brought formidable vitality, and rhapsodized spirit with such new tunes as the theme from "Star Wars" and the "Alpha Momba."

Seemingly always in key as well as in tune, the Pep Band proved their dexterity by accompanying pep rallies, home basketball games, and away football games. The leader of this fearless, adventurous band was senior Robert Medina; equally important to the Pep Band was sponsor Mr. Barry Ulrich.

Sassy bass sounds from Albert Castelum, Jon Matsumoto, and Ben Hernandez, added a happy beat to the "Alpha Momba"

Hawaii Bound, Symphonic Band Is on the Move

"The cream of the crop," most adequately described the Symphonic Band since only the best musicians were selected and, like Marching Band performed at festivals and competitions where they were matched against other high school symphonic bands. The Symphony's activities included participation in a clinic workshop where variation instruments as well as rhythm sections got together and worked on perfecting their musical craftsmanship.

In addition, this year's extraordinary Symphonic Band fascinated their audiences during their performance at Schurr's Spring Concert. This year's Symphonic Band proved to be more mobile than previous years; they played at the Montebello Festival, Eastmont Intermediate School, and the Pop Concert to promote their summer trip to Hawaii to attend music camp.

no ivory tower for SCHURR'S BOSS

With an assortment of pens near by, Principal Walter Wohlheter was always ready to inscribe his authoritative autograph onto various memos, papers, and documents.

Getting away from his bustling office for a brief relaxation period was no simple task. While Mr. Wohlheter casually chatted with Mr. Robert Conolly, Mrs. Shirley Foster, or Mr. James Pike in the Teacher's Lounge, school matters would inevitably creep into the conversation, blending business with pleasure.

During lunch, while huddling over their food or darting to the speedlines and cafeteria line, students would often see Mr. Wohlheter jovially ambling around campus to converse with their fellow classmates.

"This school year has been the finest in Schurr High School's short history. The achievements in athletics, music, publications and other activities have been outstanding in every respect. We can be proud to say we are from Schurr.

The attainment of success is due to the fine staff whose leadership brings forth the best from an exceptionally talented student body. The Spectrum is an example of our attainment with its exciting recording and display of 'the way it was' in 1977-78 at Schurr High School."

A daily swarm of anxious students constantly filed in and out of the Guidance Center; the call for help even became more intensified as grading time approached.

Besides helping students schedule their classes, remedy credit deficiencies, and solve numerous discipline and academic problems, the Counselors busied themselves with other responsibilities. Mr. Charles Zoolalian supervised the smoking area behind school, while Mr. Andy Sais acted as the unofficial Spanish translator for the counseling office.

Mr. Richard Holz, newly transferred from the Social Studies Department, developed his own "shuttle diplomacy." Since a major part of his new job was to advise seniors of financial aids available, he often visited classrooms to meet and advise seniors who might otherwise not be aware of financial opportunities available to them in college.

The desire to give concise information by means of a one-to-one communication system resulted in Mrs. Joyce Jordan also popping into senior classrooms. She clarified crucial deadline dates for those seniors confused over the manifold college entrance procedures.

Reaching out to assist all students, the triumvirate of Deans, Mrs. Shirley Foster, Mr. Bob Conolly, and Mr. Stu Pike often worked outside their offices. During most pupil-free time periods they could be seen sauntering around campus with cheerful greetings of "Hello," watchful for any turbulence among the students at the same time.

NEW FACES

Old faces in new places cropped up everywhere in the Administration. All the newfangled administrators, however, were already members of the staff. Mr. Malcolm Lincoln, new Director of Student Finances, was adequately used to toiling with figures and money problems as a former Math instructor at Schurr. Also using previous experience was Mr. Ben Byers, new Director of Campus Supervision and former P.E. Athletic Director. Taking Mr. Byers' place as Athletic Director was Mr. Jim Benes, P.E. teacher and coach at Schurr for three years.

With these new additions administrators, old and new alike, worked together for total U.S.B. involvement in various campus drives and contests.

Money, money, money wasn't the only concern of Mr. Lincoln. Providing adequate supplies in the Student Store and expanding student body card sales were also high on his priority list.

And high on the school's priority list was keeping students in class. "So beware of the blitz," was a policy strictly enforced this year. Many unsuspecting students were caught without hall passes and given detention hours.

Not only Schurr students were the object of security concern, however; Mr. Byers' staff had to combat the problems of non-Schurr students on campus, parking lot vandalism, and truant students. Since Mr. Byers couldn't supervise the entire campus at once, he was assisted by six trustworthy college aides.

"Bilingual" became a frequently used word on campus to many foreign and non-foreign students after Mr. Ternance Devney was appointed director of Bilingual programs in the district. The bilingual programs were conceived to provide instruction in two languages to meet the needs of foreign speaking students. Mr. Devney provided educational material in both English and Spanish while college aides assisted students who needed individual help.

Many students new to the Science Department were dismayed to discover Chemistry a deeply math-oriented study. But gradually they mastered the art of converting in the metric system, often with a trusty calculator at hand.

Despite the confusion of test tubes, Bunsen burners, and indistinguishable bottles of chemicals, Chemistry students in Mr. Boatman's class managed to turn in lab work-ups on time. Lab work also occupied time in Mr. Glen Sewell's Science 1-2 classes where chicken wings and worms were meticulously dissected in the name of science. Such investigative work created an atmosphere of camaraderie among the students as they helped each other unscramble the lab manual's instructions.

Students responded to Mr. Garnett Hill's enthusiastic springtime description of his pet course, "Human Structures and Processes," by registering in large numbers for the class in September.

As a new Science 1-2 teacher, Mr. David Hokyo emphasized the general concepts of science to his pupils. He also taught Math 1-2 when not enlightening his science students.

"¿Como esta, Señor?" rang within the walls of "A" building along with the romantic "Je te Adore." But lofty conversation wasn't all that went on in the Foreign Language classes.

Department chairman, Mr. Leon Larson was proud to accept special funds that bought textbooks for the students who reacted with more enthusiasm toward the newer and better language texts.

Learning a foreign language wasn't always serious business. There were times when students commanded (in the foreign language, of course) their teachers to perform tasks such as kissing a fellow teacher and impromptu singing. Writing poems, French monopoly, and Bingo also provided the students with an entertaining and enjoyable program.

Back from a trip around the world, Mrs. Geraldine Sperling settled back again into teaching French.

Not too far away from the language classrooms, Schurr's own Special Education courses carried on with their gains in helping those students who have learning difficulties. The Educationally Handicapped programs along with Learning Disability classes allowed pupils to achieve by methods of small group teaching and individual attention.

Subjects such as reading, math, American studies, English, health, and driver education provided students with much needed skills and knowledge. Newly added equipment, including tapes of 50's radio shows, helped to develop students' listening skills.

versatile artists gain momentum and

—MEMENTOES—

Preparing for Schurr's art exhibition and the Pomona fair, Mr. Shelton and student Danielle Butcher, discuss possible entries

Thanks to the prosperous outcome of last year's annual crafts sale, a new wax injector for casting jewelry was purchased. Mr. Larry Shelton's craft classes skillfully took advantage of the machine to create numerous intricately fashioned silver bracelets, necklaces, and rings. Veteran crafts students were only slightly surprised when Mr. Shelton lengthened the jewelry project assignment to make full use of the wax injector.

More good news awaited students who enrolled in Photography, as the new photography teacher Mr. Marvin Inouye, revamped the Photography Fundamentals 1-2 class, making it equivalent to a vocational program. Although color photography had been taught in the past, Mr. Inouye decided to pass it up this year in order to concentrate on the development of black and white photography techniques.

Student-produced photographs, ceramics, macramé designs, sand sculptings, and paintings, occupied every visible display spot in the spring art show. Nearly 500 pieces of art from Mrs. Joanne Osborne's classes were open to view. Students, teachers, and other visitors were mesmerized by the professionalism mirrored in the work. "The art show motivates students to take art classes to do their own thing," observed Ms. Judy Jurasek.

Many of the students' award-winning designs were sent to the Pomona Fair as well as other shows for further exhibition where more awards were accumulated.

The hard work and sweat that produced the hand-wrought art also produced victories for the Mighty Spartan Band. Each succeeding parade competition reaped top prizes for the band that refueled the desire to be number one in the southland.

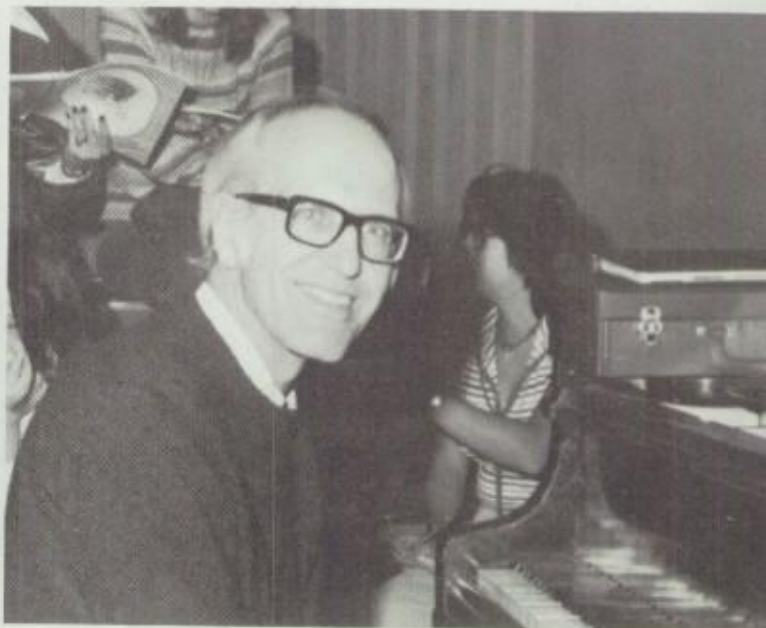

Mr. Barry Ulrich's talents, however, did not stop with directing the marching band; under his paternal guidance, the newly forged orchestra achieved musical perfection.

Next door to the sounds of musical instruments, the vocal cords of the Vocal Ensemble and A Capella Choir echoed traditional and contemporary tunes. With a larger variety of material to work from than last year, they discovered their ability to sing more diversified, difficult types of music. Their highly praised performances reverberated the growth of their singing. Mr. David Lebow, choir director, explained that their vocal polish "reflects the continued process of recruitment and development." Freshman Choir's choralizing proved this point.

The two annual musical productions, Fiddler on the Roof and Pajama Game continued to provide high caliber entertainment for those who were able to find seats in the jam-packed auditorium.

Unprecedented numbers of academically enriched courses burst into existence in Schurr's English Department to fill the vacuum of students' differing needs. Intensely popular and well-populated, World Literature meshed rigorous reading and writing with the study of culture. Their minds and that of their World Literature teachers, Mrs. Lucille McGinnis and Mr. Clark Barrett, literally exploded with wonder when they undertook a once-in-a-lifetime tour of the celebrated King Tut exhibit at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

Fortifying their study of Greek mythology, English 1-2 AE classes taught by Miss Ella Wing and Mr. Norman Stevens, traveled to the J. Paul Getty Museum in Malibu to see Greek and Roman statuary. A visit to a Buddhist temple and Chinatown helped freshmen better understand the Chinese culture when delving into the Good Earth.

But writing well-formed essays hit top priority in English 1-2 and 3-4. Team teachers, Mrs. Virginia Wiley and Ms. Sue Belt compelled their English 3-4 AE pupils to spend numerous hours memorizing P.S.A.T. and S.A.T. preparatory vocabulary words, while class discussions on Shakespeare's Richard the III encouraged students to voice their literary opinions.

Mr. Stevens captivated and enriched his American Literature pupils with his slides of Thoreau's, Steinbeck's, and Poe's former homes and communities. After breezing through the dreamy prose of The Great Gatsby, students grappled with the more difficult phraseology of The House of the Seven Gables.

Thru the magical medium of photography and the fingering of jellybeans, Language Fundamentals students became deeply aware of their five senses. Armed with this newly developed sensitivity, they carefully applied their mind's eye to reading and writing skills.

Keen observation was also a basic ingredient in writing imaginatively in Miss Merlene Hill's Creative Writing class. By strolling through the solitude of a park, students were stirred into writing with more thought and fantasizing human qualities onto inanimate objects.

In Ms. Joy Cimarusti's AE Composition class, students developed and refined the techniques of analyzing and writing themes about literature. The mere absorption of various works of popular poets and authors aided them in stylizing their own compositions.

Students frying pancakes in Karo Syrup instead of Wesson Oil was only one form trouble could take in Mrs. Coffman's "Eats and Treats" class; trouble could also occur when uncooperative ovens produced headaches instead of souffles. But foods students did more than just creative cooking; they had the chance to hear guest speakers expound on such topics as alcoholism, birth control, birth defects, and abortion.

Mrs. Yvonne Lindrum also incorporated outside learning aids in teaching "Parenting and Child Care." A field trip taken to Mount Sac provided Schurr students the opportunity to learn fun activities for preschoolers which might be incorporated into the child care class.

New to the Home Economics Department, Mrs. Jean Cho introduced new assignments for her "Survival for Singles" classes. Students realized the great benefits of assertiveness through a short "Being Assertive" course, while economy was the point of creating a single-serving breakfast for less than sixty cents.

While home economics students prepared themselves to deal with homelife, Industrial Arts students acquired useful skills such as how to repair car engines and how to construct bookshelves. To help the would-be carpenters, a $7,000.00 planar saw was purchased to more accurately smooth away rough spots on wood projects.

For the purpose of understanding and designing complicated blueprints, Mr. Larry Jones deepened the usage of the metric system in drafting. global trips and head trips —EXPAND HORIZONS—

Freshmen took a 'round the world tour by way of their research skills in World Geography classes. By fictitiously planning a trip to a foreign country, students were compelled to rummage among library shelves as well as gather brochures from travel agencies to compile a report.

Not all Social Studies instruction demanded leg work of the young scholars however; viewing filmstrips and memorizing maps also ingrained the geography of the world into their minds. Visual reinforcement was particularly effective when Mr. Steve Terry showed his electrifying slides of Europe.

While World Geography students studied in their classrooms, Humanities students ventured out of Montebello for first-hand educational experiences. Exploring contemporary art at the L.A. County Art Museum, chatting with inmates at the Chino Prison, and observing laboratories at Marineland, spurred students toward a deeper awareness of their fellow beings and the world around them.

Learning California's history proved to be painless as interested Humanities students spent two dazzling days in San Simeon to tour Hearst Castle. But students were not constantly on the road since book reports and jotting down notes relating to California history kept them engrossed in the classroom refining their grammar and writing skills.

American Studies instructors endeavored to develop writing abilities by injecting into exams a question to be responded in essay form. In Mr. David Lebow's American Studies 2 class, all tests were essay and his pupils incessantly produced five to seven page reports as preparation for writing a 30-page term paper during second semester.

Psychology instructor Mr. Russ Davis likewise assigned study-related books such as the Catcher in the Rye and Crime and Punishment. Analyzed from a psychological perspective, these novels aided students in comprehending the complex workings of the human mind.

New to the department, Mr. Casey O'Gorman taught American Studies I to sophomores eager to explore the early years of the United States.

"Scoring big" on tests was the password in the Math and Health and Career Departments. Accentuation was placed on test scores and teachers in both departments strove for better student comprehension of study material.

Health and Career classes had informational speakers from the State Employment Department. These speakers informed students of the importance of having a Social Security card and filling out job application forms neatly. The Health program also offered speakers from such relevant groups as Alcoholics Anonymous and the Fire Department Paramedics.

Added to the list of dedicated Health and Safety teachers was Driver Education instructor Mr. Armando Marentes.

In the Math Department instructors worked relentlessly to bring students to a better understanding of math and problem solving. Teaching Pre-Algebra for the first time at Schurr were Mrs. Jennie Kao and Mr. Gary Delano. Also new to the Math Department were Mr. Francis Abbott, former Science instructor, and Mr. David Hokyo, previously known to Spartans as a coach at Schurr.

For multitudes of students the diverse Physical Education courses exposed their weak and accentuated their strong skills. Properly thrusting and twisting their hips to swing a golf club, or hitting a tennis ball over the net but not off the court, kept students appropriately exercised. After a successful taste of a particular sport, students often flocked to try out for 6th period's competing teams.

Sophomore girls became heartily fit after braving the required aerobic fitness and weight training courses. Many juniors and seniors took "Self Defense" as a change of pace from the usual P.E. electives. Although bruises and sore muscles pained all, these martial artists mastered the basic, frightful looking stances, floor throws, and safe falling techniques.

While Cal State L.A. student Ken Kleager helped his self defense students flip each other, new P.E. teacher Mrs. Irene Fasnacht, sitting with her plaster cast leg propped up, pointed out the proper forehand grip to her tennis pupils. On crutches for the first few weeks of school, Mrs. Fasnacht nevertheless taught regular P.E. classes, and upon recovery coached Girls' Varsity Softball and Girls' Junior Varsity Volleyball teams.

Also new to Schurr this year was Mr. Mike Garcia, coach for the highly-rated Girls' Varsity Volleyball team. During second semester he trained Schurr's gymnasts.

With the expanded enrollment this year, Business Department centers were transformed from sedate, formal classrooms into bustling business offices where teachers were the "bosses" and pretentious students their "employees." Although these courses were simulations, they rendered actual office situations.

Enterprising students weren't the only ones attending school; business teachers intensified their knowledge by attending workshops set-up by the L.A. County Career Education Section.

Leaving their noisy typewriters in the classroom, business students ventured to Rio Hondo College where they competed with other high school students in various office skills.

Why did so many students want to get into business classes? Maybe it was because of the inspiring secretarial staff. These impressive ladies were always giving a helpful hand as well as a friendly smile. Secretary to the counselors, Mrs. Mitsie Miya was also overseer of C.S.F. and college application forms. If book fines were the problem, Mrs. Naoma Ewing was there with an understanding heart and an open hand.

Did you ever whiff the aroma of sugar cookies baking early in the morning? And did you occasionally munch on frosted cinnamon rolls and sip orange juice during nutrition? These early morning miracles were made possible by the Cafeteria Workers who, by arriving as early as 6:30, were able to dole out nutrition treats as well as begin preparing the huge fare for lunch.

Quarter-pounders proved to be the all-time favorite and "Milk Does Something for Every Body" seemed to be the good word, for milk drinking exceeded the gulping down of cokes for the first time. While the cafeteria workers busied themselves in preparing the food, custodians strove to eliminate the leavings of the food: crumpled chip bags, styrofoam trays, and Coca Cola cups.

The Custodians labored during and after school to tidy up rooms and dispose of the daily remnants of learning. Pencil sharpeners were repaired, blackboards spotlessly erased, and trash cans emptied by the time first period rolled around again. Due to the cooperative trash picking efforts of the students, teachers, and custodians, head custodian Herman Presentati admitted that "he had to look hard to find the trash" this year.

"Mirror, Mirror on the Wall; Am I a Senior After All"

Before the dressing room mirror in Fischera's Studio, you asked yourself "Do I look like a senior?" Just when you decided you still felt and looked like the junior of three months ago, the photographer yanked you away from your reflection and into the blaze of the bright lights for six shots of your suntanned face. After the ordeal, you glanced one more time at the mirror and tried to figure out how a senior was supposed to look and act. As a freshman you had thought seniors were so grown-up: they drove cars, had jobs, knew practically everything, and were ready to enter the harsh world. That was what you thought! But there was a slight truth behind this freshman image of a senior, after all.

Dealing with the multitude of decisions in your senior year was rough, but with near-adult maturity, you overcame the pains. When your senior portrait proofs arrived, the whole family tried to decide which one was the most photogenic you. Thanking Dad for adoring your toothiest pose and Mom for liking the wistful-looking one, you proceeded to your room to choose independently.

You pried into the future to determine what you wanted to do in life. Like the '70's, career-orientated seniors who now ponder over the if's of raising children, you too opened your mind to the possibilities of the future.

And on that June afternoon, when you adjusted your overgrown graduation cap on your head, you noticed in the mirror that you did, after all, look like a senior.

Even Sand Box Buddies Grow Up

In most seniors' earliest memories there was always someone to play with or take a bath with. In kindergarten everyone had a best buddy, someone he could rely on for help if he fell off the swing. As the years went by, he made new friends and thought these would be his lifelong buddies.

But it wasn't until high school when he met the people he'd probably remain friends with.

He wanted to have as much fun as possible during his four high school years and having friends was the best way to do this. He attended every football game with them, every dance, and spent almost every Sunday playing baseball with them. And when he became a senior, he knew that after graduation he would still be close to these friends.

They all went to Grad Nite together, attended the Prom and sat together with their dates, and enjoyed themselves on Senior Ditch Day. On graduation day they cried, hugged each other, and reminded one another of all the good times they had.

“Let’s Go Fox Hunting!”

“Wow, who was that?”

“I don’t know, but she was something mighty fine.”

Dialogues like this were common discussions among Schurr’s senior male population. The “varsity bench” or the grass area next to the Guidance Center were the most popular locations selected by unattached males devoted to the pursuit of unattached females.

Schurr men were blessed with the fact that the highest concentration of foxy ladies was probably found right here! Nothing this side of heaven quite compared with the foxy Schurr High School females.

Off-campus, Schurr men continued to pursue their favorite pastime. As the sun began to soak up the sand on the beach, more and more handsomely-tanned Spartans were kicking back at the beach. Men didn’t just take footballs to the beach to play football; instead they tucked their tummies in and passed the ball as close as possible to a good-looking chick so they could get a better view.

Whether they admitted it or not, most senior men were on the constant prowl for the perfect angel, God’s greatest achievement: a beautiful woman.

"Merchers" share some of the best gossip around, especially when it is passed along the grapevine by Laura Chaides and Sandy Gong

A Part of Me to Everyone

While tucking Dewey processed photos of my friends into the plastic pockets of my wallet, I also catalogued the growth of my friends. Their smiling faces altered with age as did the content of their messages scribbled on the backs of photos.

Not until I compared the faces and messages of one friend's junior and freshmen years, did I realize how much one's character could be deduced from a photo. So this year, I posed in front of the mirror longer than usual to sharpen my looks for the ultimate senior portrait. And I spent more time composing that special note on the back of each photograph before its final trade off.

Instead of jotting down a stale "See you in September and have a fun summer," in my friends' yearbooks, I reached into myself for more meaningful farewell even though the chaotic finals schedule limited my time for autographing. Despite the rush against time, I avoided falling back on the handy old standby of "Good luck next year." I persisted in incorporating a fact or two of myself into all the messages I wrote.

Because of the revealing nature of such messages, I intended to give special treatment to that "certain" person's yearbook in hopes that my writing would spark an interest in the "real" me. I also hoped that friends would perceive in the announcement cards I gave them, a bit of myself, through my choice of the engraving style.

The urge to give away a part of me to all people I had encountered at Schurr was irresistible. The announcement cards, messaged photographs, and autographed annuals became chunks of myself that I freely gave as tokens of lasting memories.

Even Campus Cut-ups Need Love

I was itching to end this last year as quickly as possible; while most seniors enjoyed lazing back. I was busy devising ways to speed up my last year at Schurr. I ditched half my classes on Mondays, and the other half on Fridays. I felt great knowing my plans were running smoothly. Then pow! I received a stapled call-slip during the longest period of the day, 2nd period. It called me to the dean's office where I was lectured to for at least fifteen whole minutes. Unfortunately, I was soon sent back to class, but I used up the last minutes of class for making more elaborate plans for the following week.

That Monday I stuffed a man-like dummy with bundles of newspaper; on it, I posted a sign saying "School's a bummer," and hung it from the top of C-building by its scrawny neck. This feat luckily consumed my time until noon. It was then that the dummy attracted the attention of Mr. Pike, Mr. Conolly and Mr. Wohlheter. I rejoiced knowing I would spend the next couple of hours in the principal's office chatting with these three kindly administrators.

After several more weeks executing such acts, I discovered that this routine had become excruciatingly dull, so I then dedicated myself to speeding up my senior year by enjoying school for a change, even if it meant catching "Senoritis."

Popping the Question Again

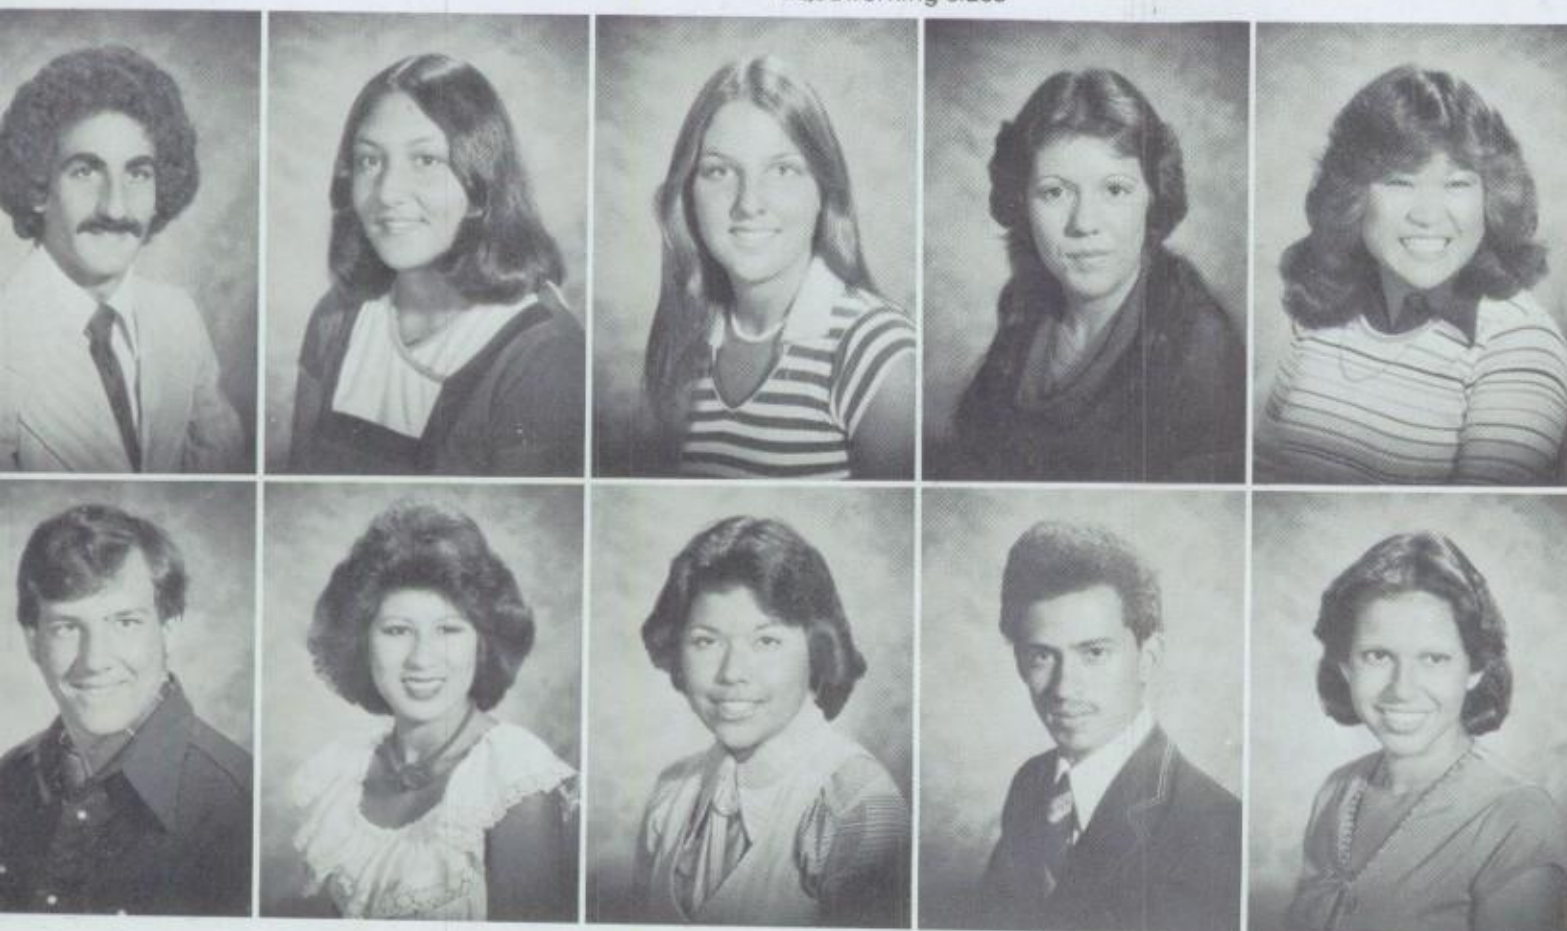

Since babyhood, seniors have cringed under the scrutinizing eyes of some friendly neighbor, store Santa, or helpful counselor who has asked the interminable question, "What do you want to be when you grow up?" Of course, much too young to even think of a career then, they only fantasied about one. But now, as a senior, the question arose with much more impact, for what once was a fleeting thought, now became a persistent dilemma.

Programs such as R.O.P. and Work Experience, however, provided the clue as into what field a senior might venture. Students interested in the field of medicine could gain knowledge through such programs as Hospital Aide and Dental Training. These programs provided on-the-site training enabling the student to experience real-life situations that could prove to be catalysts for a lifetime career. Those who had some idea for a suitable profession got on-the-job experience and obtained school credit with the General Work Experience Program.

The Humanities class offered volunteer work for seniors at Rosewood Park Elementary in the Trainable Mentally Retarded Program. Many students found that working with retarded children was the type of job they liked best. Child Development classes opened up a new horizon for those who enjoyed the pleasure of helping children to develop. But even with the guidance and counseling one received in past years, most seniors' career plans were still indefinite in June '78.

Freewheeling Year Is Haunted by College Nightmares

With one year left, seniors sought as many exhilarating moments that time would allow. One experience many did not deliberately seek, but one which persisted nevertheless, was the tedious process of applying for college.

College-bound seniors fitfully spent hours selecting and applying to prospective colleges, hoping that their smeary printing was readable to admission offices' processors. And braving through those S.A.T. and achievement tests drained what riches existed in their brains as well as in their wallets.

Robbed by the expense of college entrance exams and college applications, most seniors jumped at the chance to receive financial aid. Sometimes even applying for money cost money; processing financial aid forms required $4.50 from the already depleted pockets of seniors.

Many seniors graduated with knotted nerves after drawn-out ordeals with filling out forms, meeting deadlines and hoping for post card notices of "Yes, you're in" from the college of their choice, and "Yes, you'll get it" from the scholarship service. Preparing for college was one experience seniors would never forget.

Seniors Keep Up Winning Tradition

The seniors again proved they were #1 during '77 Spirit Week. On Thursday a special pep rally was held for seniors where pogo sticks, complete with riders, hopped across the stage and neon-tenic nipple-suckers drank down Coke from baby bottles.

On Friday the seniors won, not only the jug yell, but also the building decoration contest for magnificently decorating "A" building. They also captured an award in the trash-can painting contest, artistically designed by Eddie Noriega.

At the spirit day carnival the senior cabinet sold sweet-tasting churros and cotton candy. These fund-raisers were a success in making extra money for the class' many activities.

Appropriately, the seniors' last spirit week proved triumphant. One pleased class member commented, "It was a thrill to be in a class that put out so much effort to be #1."

Somewhere Over the Rainbow

The day my registration papers arrived, I became infected with "Senior Virus." Immediately I knew that I had contracted a rare strain of the notorious "Taking-it-easy-senior-year" sickness. Unlike other afflicted seniors, I did not pine away for a three-period day or weekly senior ditch day. I longed for a six-period day of electives.

With only one high school year left, I couldn't miss the chance to take courses vital for surviving as a senior.

Since I relied on my beloved car to whisk me off to Fischera Studios to take my momentous senior portrait, I desperately needed to learn about my car's involved machinery and maintenance requirements. If I took "Auto Mechanics," I would at least know what to do in the case of brake failure. Without access to a healthy car, a senior would probably perish from flaccidity.

Being number one meant acting and dressing number one! By taking "Eats and Treats," my standing as a senior would be firmly situated; it was time to sponge my mother's complaint

"When are you going to learn to cook?" and prove my independence by cooking my own Campbell soup. Mending and transforming my mediocre clothes into ultra-classy attire required my attending "Clothing and Textiles" class. Looking like a regal senior demanded learning the skill of stitch and sew. It would be a total disgrace to the class of '78 if one of its seniors paraded across the P.E. field in gingham-patched gym shorts.

To prove to my friends that there was more to me than "meets the eye," I would have to enroll in an art class. It was my last chance to unleash my hidden creativity and scoop up an honorable mention to stick into my empty scrapbook.

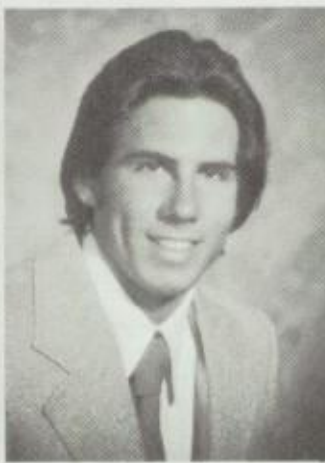

Filling the scrapbook would be a breeze if I learned picture-taking in "Photography Fundamentals." I could stop fretting about my forgetful memory and let the camera record my friend blackening her face with mascara-tinted tears on graduation day.

Since I wanted to make sure my name was spelled correctly beneath my senior portrait, I would have to become a yearbook staffer. Helping to create the '78 Spectrum would dispel my worries about this.

But sadly enough, the administrators objected to my six-period elective day . . . it was at that moment that I recovered from the "Senior Virus."

Twelve Years of Take-Home Headaches

You hate it! You come home with it every night . . . well, almost every night. Homework has been your close companion ever since you first took home the "See Jane Run, See Dick Run" bestseller. You despise lugging home those tired Pee Chees and dog-eared books, but after nearly twelve years of lounging in front of the television with your math book to review for the next day's test, you slowly became addicted to homework. Those 5:30 a.m. pop-eyed memory sessions with your Psychology vocabulary list, races through the last thirty pages of a novel during nutrition, or the hasty typing of a report on an overworked, undernourished typewriter no longer made you cry and curse at the same time.

Although you didn't relish it, you did tolerate it. You effortlessly squelched the urge to dump your English homework into the nearest trash can and soon learned to focus your hate on something else.

Raisner-Smith Debut Gets Rave Reviews

Nearly one hundred thirty seniors participated in a two-hour class in which only seniors were welcome: Humanities. While other classes were exploring the fashionable King Tutankhamen treasures at the L.A. County Art Museum and the Russian Cultural Exhibit at the Convention Center, Humanities students were exploring the inner walls of the men's prison at Chino. Inmates spoke to the class about their prison lives, their privileges as well as their restrictions. Leaving the romantic concept of a convict's life behind them once and for all, most seniors were convinced that prison life was less agreeable than the pursuit of education.

More conventional as a field trip was the Humanities' trip to San Simeon where a tour of Hearst's castle was taken. The ninety students who were able to go meandered through the elegant rose gardens, swayed over the glossy 104 foot pool, and felt like dwarfs while inside the twenty-two-foot-high main living room. Awed seniors "looked but not touched" while viewing the priceless antiquities that adorned each of the rooms.

Although field trips provided an added dimension to the class that was otherwise unattainable within the four walls of D-14, the Humanities group also got involved with an in-depth study of religious thought throughout the world. Informing yet not proselytizing, religious practitioners from a variety of faiths such as Hindu, Roman Catholic, Jewish, and Christian Science visited the Humanities class in order to expand the students' awareness of the differences and commonalities of the world's various religions.

Teaming for the first time, Mr. Bill Raisner and Mr. Dick Smith provided an exciting atmosphere in which to work.

Pursuit of Happiness Keeps Seniors on the Move

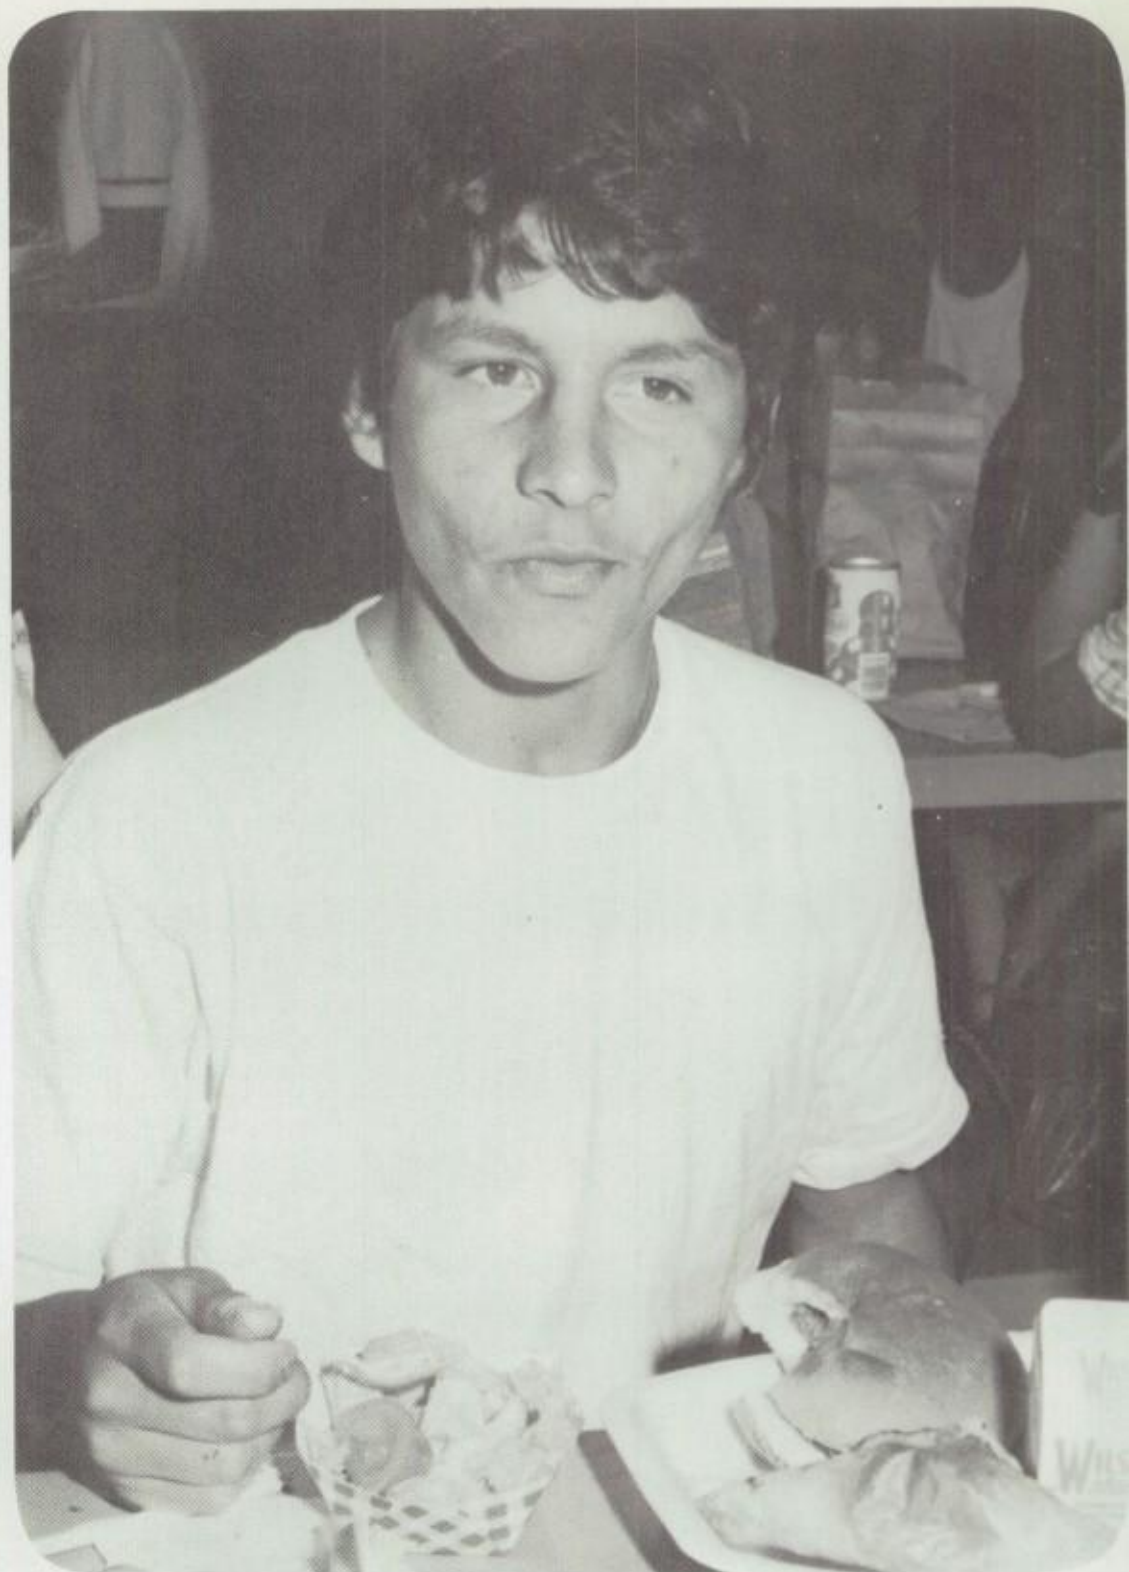

"Kickin' back" and "Doin' your own thing" was a noticeable trend among the class of '78.

Pastimes ranging from relaxing in the Senior Park to scarfing sloppy-joes and juice bars were practiced every day. Some upperclassmen reclined in the popular student lounge or rapped with each other in the amphitheater. Others congregated in the smoking area while those bogged down with homework filed into the library. But the choice time for friends to gather was at the Friday night football games. Whether home or away, the spirit that drifted in the air seemed to gather friends together.

Progressing through the year with ease, seniors who were thrilled by doing their own thing stayed after school to compete in sports, stood in front of the finance office observing nice-looking members of the opposite sex or partook in various fund raiser activities.

To over half the classmen, money-making was a hit as they worked hard pumping gas, filing records and cooking hamburgers.

Until times change and fads fade away, "kickin' back" and "doin' your own thing" will continue to endure in the lives of seniors.

Do-gooders Find Multiple Outlets for Expression

Seniors concerned themselves daily with relieving throbbing homework pains and cooling down high exam fevers. But they still had the energy to volunteer for and devote themselves to improving the school in every possible aspect.

Artistic students who created colorful banners informing other classmates of special events to come, ink-happy journalists who dispatched scads of information onto a quad-paged newspaper, and the great imaginative minds who designed yet another unique breed of yearbook, all united to enliven the school environment.

To those seniors who assisted in scooping us our chow each day and to those special people who toiled over balancing our ledgers in the Finance Office, and of course to all the attractive "Call-Slip" girls who the guys loved to gawk at, thanks were in order. Also appreciated were the flower-pickers for blossoming such a rosy senior float for us. All in all, seniors elevated from just the ordinary routines of compiling reports and dressing for gym.

If I Could Only Dance

An estimated guess of the number of times I have changed my occupational outlook would nearly equal the number of fans who attended the Rose Bowl game last January. With every fad, movie, or sports event, I wanted to be the first kid on my block to acquire national acclaim in that field.

With the rise of racial unrest I wanted to be a social worker, and when the '68 Olympics came about, I wanted to float into the swimming scene, and if that failed, I wanted to bend myself into gymnastics.

By the time I entered the seventh grade I had cancelled out being a stewardess, jockey, a veterinarian and a tight-end for U.S.C. I also dreamed of being a psychologist once, but I figured I had enough problems of my own.

Well now, as I'm about to leave the protected world of high school and venture out into the harsh, evil world, I have decided to try my hand at magazine design, but on the other hand, I just viewed "Saturday Night Fever" and if I could only dance . . .

My Mattel "Hotwheels" Are All I Have

I'd been needling my parents to buy a new family car ever since I got my drivers' license. At that time, I was just learning the trade of salting french fries at McDonald's and my bi-weekly check was so modest I couldn't afford a bike, let alone a car. And now, a senior, I was older and bolder, but still impoverished. I needed my own car and simply had to convince my parents to buy one for me.

I pestered them every day. My first victim, Mom, was vacuuming one day when I shouted over the Hoover's hum how incapacitated I felt when dad forbade me to drive his beloved '59 Dodge. Then I threw my double punch by complaining about the sad state of my social life. No matter how carefully the drivers of our family designated who was to have Dad's Dodge or Mom's Datsun on appointed days, I would usually get stuck at home while sister and brother disappeared with the two cars on Friday nights.

Dad heard the same speech I gave Mom, but I gave him a few more reasons since he was the financial head of the household. I explained to him that if I biked down to college, I might get run over by a frenzied motorist or die from exposure. He agreed with me that biking to college was insane because L.A. is the land of freeways. Anyway, how could I chauffeur my friends around town on a bicycle? To move Dad further over to my side, I described the time a shifty-looking man approached me while I was waiting for the bus. If the bus hadn't arrived at that moment, I might have been the next "Strangler" victim!

I won Dad's sympathy with my plea, but I still wasn't sure if my parents really intended to buy a car for me. But I continued prodding them with occasional murmurings of "wouldn't it be terrific if I got a car for graduation . . ."

Down and Out Seniors Leave a Trail of Debts

Despite the painful price of 2x3 senior color glossies, or the green and gold enameled senior keys, seniors continued to whip out from their wallets the necessary amount of money for the various last-year-in- to prevent seniors from sloshing to the finance office window to order graduation announcements, 100 for $6.50.

Although they voluntarily sacrificed their Christmas money or weekly pay checks for these senior keepsakes, being compelled to pay for something somehow made some seniors wary with their money. Mailing off a $20.00 college application fee was agonizing since colleges didn't make refunds to unaccepted applicants. And although seniors wanted to look proper for graduation, many could not understand handing over $8.50 for a cap and gown and not even getting to keep the gown after the ceremony. Nevertheless, to participate in the ceremony, and thus impress proud relatives and friends, they reluctantly paid the rental fees.

Seniors got the chance to be photographed in a cap and gown for the souvenir photo of the entire senior class; they even frolicked at Disneyland for Grad Nite, but they also had to dig deep in their wallets for something to pay for taking part in both.

For some seniors this year was horrifyingly expensive and for others who felt "price was no object," found that the momentos were just the right price. Whether the money was drained from their pockets or their parents, all agreed that there was a price to pay for being a senior.

Thanks for the Memories Patty, Nadia, Jimmy

Clinging to the remnants of yesteryear, a youthful Angie Berru displays the beguiling smile that still enchants

Thanks Richard Nixon for showing us early in our high school careers that even presidents have to eat their words sometimes. Not only that, but because of you our history books were finally updated. And being the naive freshmen that we were, we always thought the princess was supposed to be taken away by some handsome prince, not the S.L.A. So Patty Hearst, we want to thank you for helping us see life as it is and not what we would like it to be. Adding a little fun to our otherwise dull freshmen lives, you streakers really showed us that despite the Miller's Outpost ads, clothes do not necessarily make the man. A major change occurring during our freshmen year was the reduction of the speed limit to 55 m.p.h. So rather than going 75 m.p.h., we were forced to creep along at 65.

Our sophomore year was the year Peter Frampton was everywhere. We strutted around with our Frampton T-shirts, Frampton albums, and "Frampton" written all over our Pee-Chees. Another thing that surrounded us in our sophomore year was the Bicentennial, or better put the "Buycentennial." We learned that the best way to make a buck was to stick around for the nation's Tricentennial.

Early in our junior year the long awaited summer Olympics, held in Montreal, gave Nadia Comaneci the opportunity to prove to us that perfection is not impossible, it's simply a matter of striving for it. As well "Wheaties-eater" Bruce Jenner broke the decathlon record along with all the hearts of American women.

Nearing the end of our third year at Schurr, many of us were enlightened by "Star Wars," the most profitable movie of '77. We enjoyed scowling at Darth Vader, the greatest villain of all time, and cheering Luke Skywalker who reinstated our childhood belief that the good guy wins sometimes, too.

And then our senior year, we wised up, thanks to the hillside strangler. He confirmed the message our mothers had always shouted after us as we left for school, "Don't talk to strangers," perhaps the most sound advice for our senior year.

Though over three-thousand years too late, a debt of gratitude is also owed to the Egyptian Empire of King Tut, the boy king, for bringing Tutmania to the U.S. Along with the first tour of his riches came a tidal wave of Egyptian memorabilia: Tutburgers, Tut T-shirts and mummy jewelry

And still there are many more to whom we owe thanks: The shark from "Jaws," Anita Bryant, Gary Gilmore, Death Row Martyr, the cast of "A Chorus Line," Jimmy Carter, and don't forget brother Billy, too. So on behalf of the class of '78, "Thanks for the memories."

Robinson and Co. Have a Steeple Chase Year

At the blast of the semester gun, Chris Robinson, junior class president, and her cabinet emerged from the fall starting line ready for a productive year. They got off to an early start by selling "Class of '79" buttons and jerseys for class-conscious juniors to show their solidarity. These third-year Spartans then outdistanced previous junior classes by constructing the first junior class float entry for Homecoming competition. Although the float, a swing set with the most outspoken '79er's aboard, Carol Salas and Chris Greene, did not place among the top three, juniors proudly cheered it on as it paraded around Heaman field.

Keeping busy was easy for the junior Spartans; challenging seniors to a knock-down-drag-out basketball game, selling Christmas carnations to finance their 2nd annual spring dance in April, and coming up with creative ideas to make the '77-'78 prom a memorable one.

This lively attitude led the Robinson team to a record-breaking finish.

Clever ideas for the junior Homecoming float form quickly to imaginative junior activists Debbie Lee, Suzette Horikiri, Stacey Honda.

Pop Brings in the Dough

Playing with a full deck kept juniors busy during the Spirit Day pep rally when junior officers and cabinet members maneuvered display cards reading "'79 is mighty fine." Aside from using the day to rouse class spirit, juniors took advantage of the opportunity to raise money, and for the second year juniors vended cold soda in a variety of flavors during the after-school mardi gras. Business wasn't the only thing juniors had in mind, however, they also participated in the Homecoming float contest for the first time. After-school hours and weekends were devoted to the float's framing, while last-minute flower fluffing added the finishing touches to the float: a child's swing set brightly framed and decorated with balloons and a rainbow of flowers. Though the '79'ers were edged out by the sophomores' "Zap the Vikings" float, they established a tradition nevertheless.

Visual information about career opportunities is frequently sought by juniors, such as Denise Toohey, in the Career Center

Early preparation for October's P.S.A.T. will hopefully pay off for Gordon Tomaske

The P.S.A.T. Syndrome: Headaches and Barron's Books

What's had juniors shaking in their Walla-bees since 9th grade? It's the dreaded Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test, or P.S.A.T. Even though only a preliminary test whose results would not be mailed to colleges, the P.S.A.T. was not taken lightly by scholarly juniors. Mr. Harry Manos, the Physics and Math Analysis instructor at Montebello High School prepared juniors for their P.S.A.T. by reviewing vocabulary and math two consecutive Saturdays before the scheduled testing.

The whole idea of college exams motivated some juniors to go to the counselors and discuss possible college choices. Counselors often directed students to the Guidance Center first where Mr. Walt Witt, the Career Counselor, aided them in finding their strongest occupational interest. With this new information students were then able to select a college that offered the best facilities for their particular course study.

Ego Tripping Thru High School

I had been going to Schurr for a long, long, time . . . two years, seven months, eighteen days, and three hours to be exact. For years I had patiently waited to take the electives I yearned for ever since my freshman year . . . coed tennis with a foxy partner and the "World of the Supernatural" with hair-raising nightmares . . . actually, the possibilities were endless. But there I was in my junior year taking the same electives, but more advanced versions, I had been taking as an under-underclassman; I couldn't break the habit of lovingly rolling my hands over a grimy carburetor, getting my best shirts adorned with waterproof acrylic paints, and admiring my incomparable photographs in the May Art show.

Some people say that juniors have big egos. I proved it was true!

Surf's Up Off the Wall

Free styler, park-rider or just plain side-walk surfer, the skateboard scene became an ever-popular sport with many including a few juniors.

With skateboard and rider working as a team, students found their boards to be pretty good transportation; they were even brought along with students to summer school when rules were a bit more lenient.

The magic board seemed to be a hit because of its close association to surfing. It's movement, especially when riding on park bowls or pools, gives the rider a feeling of rolling waves. After practicing several hours a day for weeks or months, a few juniors found they could do a variety of stunts and tricks on their skateboards, unlike those on the ocean's waves. "Wheelies," "360's," "fakies," and "radicals" were just a few of the wild things juniors could perform.

First of the Big Hot Spenders

Shaky knees usually accompanied a junior when he went to be interviewed for his first job, but after being accepted, a '79er was usually an industrious employee.

Often confused about how to fill out a bank deposit slip, juniors nevertheless thrilled at cashing that first check.

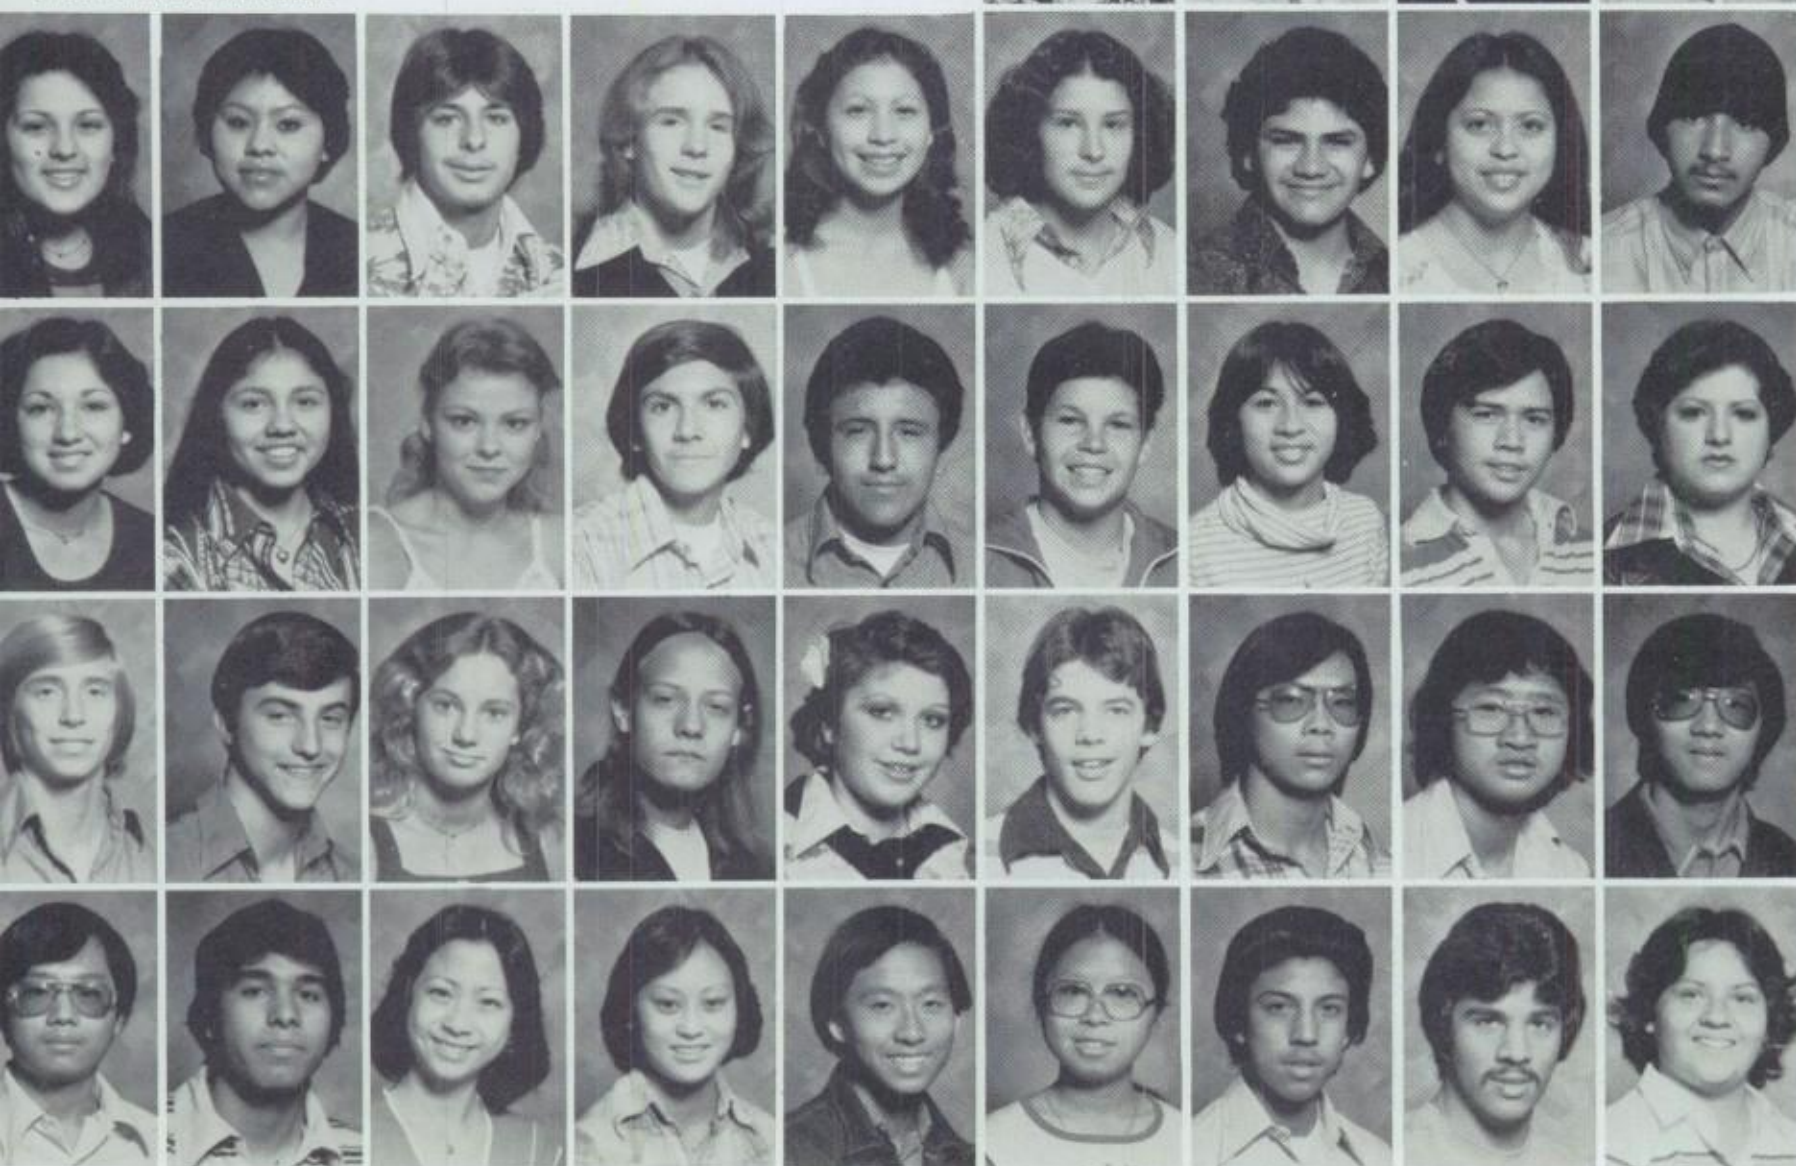

Many juniors spent their hard-earned money "Party-ing" while others preferred to save and buy something really big, like a stereo or a car. Besides the new found money supply from working, there was self satisfaction; one junior took the words out of many mouths by saying, "I like knowing I'm doing something useful, and it keeps me busy too."

2nd Term President Leads Opportunists

The sophomore class, led by two-time President Michele Marquez, Vice-President Susie Levey, Secretary Nora Guevara, eight capable cabinet members, and Advisors Mr. Garnett Hill and Mrs. Jordan, seemed to represent the best possible combination of personnel.

The year started out with the Sophomore Cabinet sponsored Disneyland trip in early December with over 200 students attending. Although the Disneyland trip was the class' top money-maker, coming in second was their Basketball Homecoming Dance in March. Adding to the already burgeoning coffer were the yummy flower suckers and the tasty delights of a bake sale, with both fund raisers making delicious profits.

Unusual in Schurr's brief history, the class leaders, mixed culturally and representing both junior high schools, worked beautifully together. Adding to the uniqueness of this sophomore team was the fact that all of this year's officers and cabinet had also served in their freshman year, which proved that good political reputations are remembered at voting time.

The Great Big Sophomore Myth

Taking it easy as a senior is the dream of every underclassman and getting graduation requirements out of the way is the first step in the quest of this goal.

By the time that you reach your sophomore year the classes you choose reflect your chances of kicking back as a senior. Therefore, eager sophomores rush through registration with a gung-ho attitude about "study now, relax later."

For the typical "college prep" student, a school day consisted of: Typing, American Studies, P.E., Geometry, A.E. English, and Foreign Language. Each class served a distinct purpose, either to fill a graduation or college requirement. But even the "easy" classes prepared one for the struggle of college life. P.E. kept one in shape to stay up till 4:00 in the morning, while using newly found typing skills to finish that 30-page term paper.

Beware sophs, the rumor about one senior year being the easiest is a myth, for after completing that A.E. English class there's always World Literature, Math Analysis, and Physics . . . Take it from a senior who knows.

Engrossed in thought, sophomore A.E. English students get a taste of college prep work.

Getting acquainted early in her high school years, Leticia Martinez may need help in the future from College Advisor Mrs. Joyce Jordan

Sophs Get On the Road

"Have you gotten your drivers' training card yet?" are the words buzzing around Drivers' Ed. As others boastfully announce the arrival of their card, you anxiously await yours. Finally the day arrives! Slowly, you read the card. It says: "Report to the simulator Thursday, at 3:00 p.m." A twinge of nervousness runs through your body. "Oh no, that's tomorrow," you think. You hardly sleep that night, but the next day goes quickly by. Before you know it, it's 3:00! Hesitantly, you walk to the ominous-looking trailer. Not seeing one familiar face, you stand quietly alone amongst chattering students. Soon the trailer doors open and you see rows of boxes, meant to represent cars. You are directed to car ten.

You soon learn that, like a real car, simulator "cars" are always in need of repairs. Another thing you learn is that it takes special talent to drive a simulator. First, when turning, the steering wheel must be turned a full 360°; second, when in doubt, brake; third, stay well below the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit even though the outdated film reads "65." These procedures all pay off, for at the end of each film the instructor calls out each car's score. If you've been "superior," you are the "superstar" of the day. However, only half the battle is over. Next comes real driving.

Again you worry all night and the next day. Quickly 3:00 comes around and you report to the parking lot, meet your instructor, and he, in turn, observes each of the frightened faces awaiting him. His first victim is a meek, terrified-appearing girl. You know the ride is going to be a real "white-knuckler." Next is your turn. You have the three students in the back seat biting their nails and the instructor folding his hands in prayer. As the days progress you know you are becoming a better driver because the passengers no longer have to be towed into the car. Finally the last day arrives and you pass your drivers' training program.

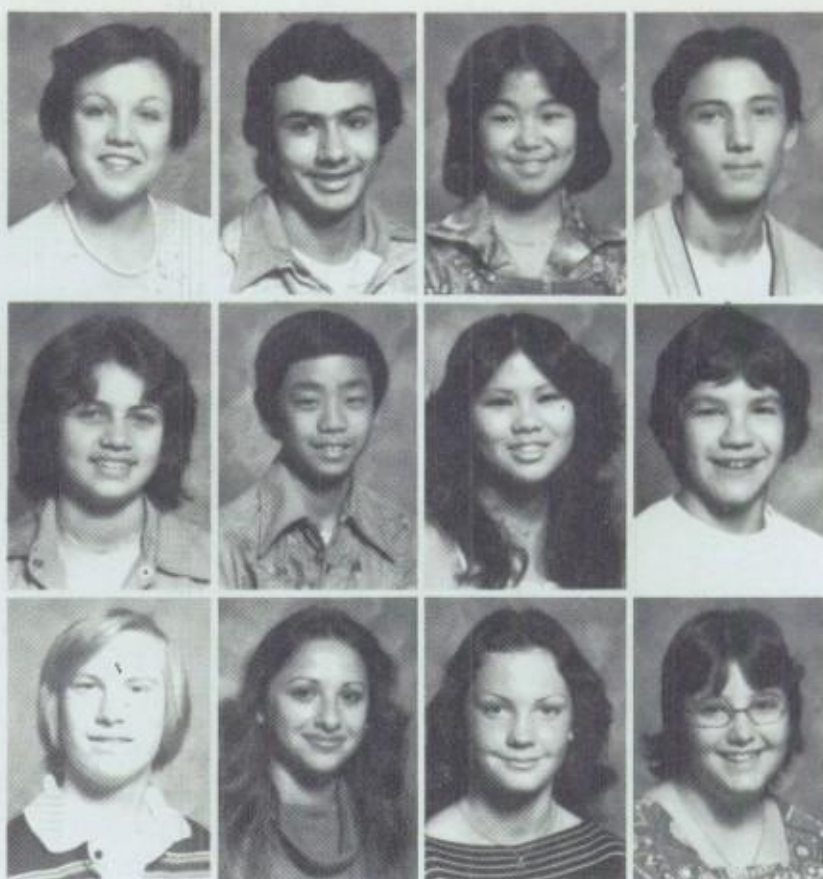

Although you still have the hassle of carrying around your "California Drivers' Handbook," half your driver education is gladly over.

Gaudy Chests Flaunt Concert Souvenirs

Sophomores clearly established themselves as rock freaks this year! You rarely saw a sophomore's Pee-Chee without pictures of "Led Zeppelin", "Aerosmith" or "Kiss" pasted on its roughened cover. Many sophomores went to concerts and returned the next day showing off T-shirts and other souvenirs they couldn't resist buying. Some of Schurr's sophomore Spartans couldn't get enough rock; they even brought their radios, tape recorders, or 8-track players to school.

The class of '80 also had different tastes; some liked "Zeppelin" while others preferred "Earth, Wind and Fire." Still others went in a totally different direction for the hard punk rock of the "Sex Pistols." Despite their differences, all of the sophomores of the Class of '80 had the music in them.

Long Live the Class of '80

With the announcement that class rings were on sale, excited sophomores were even willing to give up their lunch period to see the wide selection of styles and colors. Josten's delivered the rings, boldly printed with the number '80; they were promptly placed on waiting fingers and even on necklaces, a sign that its wearer was "taken."

Class of '80 T-shirts were seen all over campus by the time the new year rolled in. The bright green and white shirts clearly identified a Schurr sophomore among the otherwise anonymous crowd.

Getting the message across in writing seemed to be the hallmark of the year's sophomores who tried their hand at expressing themselves through clever writings on Pee-Chees and bathroom-walls where, using the grapevine approach, sophomores made certain their messages got proper attention. Some of the messages found around campus were, "Class of '80 is #1" and "Sophomores Rule." With so much effort expended to get others to know who's tops, one sophomore commented on the action, "It makes you feel more important because you are proud of your class and want to be above everyone else."

"No One Likes Being a Middleman"

Finally, sophomores trudged over one of their biggest hurdles: they were no longer the ones teased about being the youngest nor did they have the pain of worrying about college or career plans either. They were the middlemen.

But there were disparities about being in the middle. Sophomores, finally old enough to stay out a little later, unfortunately had no way to get around because they still weren't old enough to drive.

Turning fifteen was still a thrill to most sophomores; however, it still didn't guarantee employment for most. Although the minimum wage rose to $2.65 an hour, minimum working age remained sixteen. So money was a key worry. One might be able to go out after a football game but had no money to join the crowd at Shakey's.

As a sophomore, interest in the opposite sex naturally developed. Dating, or rather attending a dance with someone, might be allowed by cautious parents, but a "real" date was unheard of at this stage. So while many preferred intimate relationships, they settled for school companionships.

Maybe Snoopy was a sophomore when he said, "No one likes being a middleman."

Games Sophomores Play

Exercising one's body doesn't have to be done with dull routine exercises, especially when it can be done while playing one of many recreational games.

Light, spongy-soft Nerf football proved to be a popular recreational activity amongst sophomores who found that it sure beat the warm-ups of "cherry pickers" and "jumping jacks" in P.E. Its likeability was because the Nerf was smaller than an official football and easier to hold onto. Official football, however, was still a popular sport amongst sophomores, despite the advantages of the Nerf.

Sophomores were also flying high as they tossed saucer-shaped Frisbees at nearby parks and the school field. The disc could be thrown for great distances, which kept the receiver on the run. It also kept by-standers on the look-out to avoid getting hit by a misguided Frisbee. This inaccuracy often happened, especially to the Frisbee beginner, since it takes good arm coordination and the correct amount of fling to toss the disc in the right direction. Although sophomores seemed to lose all their energy when doing exercises for P.E., they somehow were able to regain their strength when it came to exercising in a fun way.

3-Legged Sophs Show Spunk

Sophomores proved their spirit was sky high in many ways during Spirit Week, and especially on Tuesday at their own pep rally. At this rally 3-legged races were held for the more coordinated sophomores and pogo-stick races for those with rabbit blood. Also adding to the festivities was the crowning of spirited Joe Babcock and Shari Gong who were nominated Sammy and Sandy Spartan.

During this crazy week the sophomore cabinet sold bright green and gold pennants and pompons and on Friday, the day so long awaited, the sophomore cabinet sponsored their highly profitable ring-toss booth. But the pride of the sophomore class was their first prize homecoming float, "Zap the Viking." This float was not only attractive to the viewer, but was electronically superb. Assisted by loosely recruited sophomores, the cabinet spent more than two weeks on their award-winning float, including thirteen uninterrupted hours the evening before its debut.

Last minute checks made by Michele Marquez, Hector Rodriguez, and Harvey Cohen assure perfect working order on the sophomores' winning float

Freshmen Step Into the Spotlight

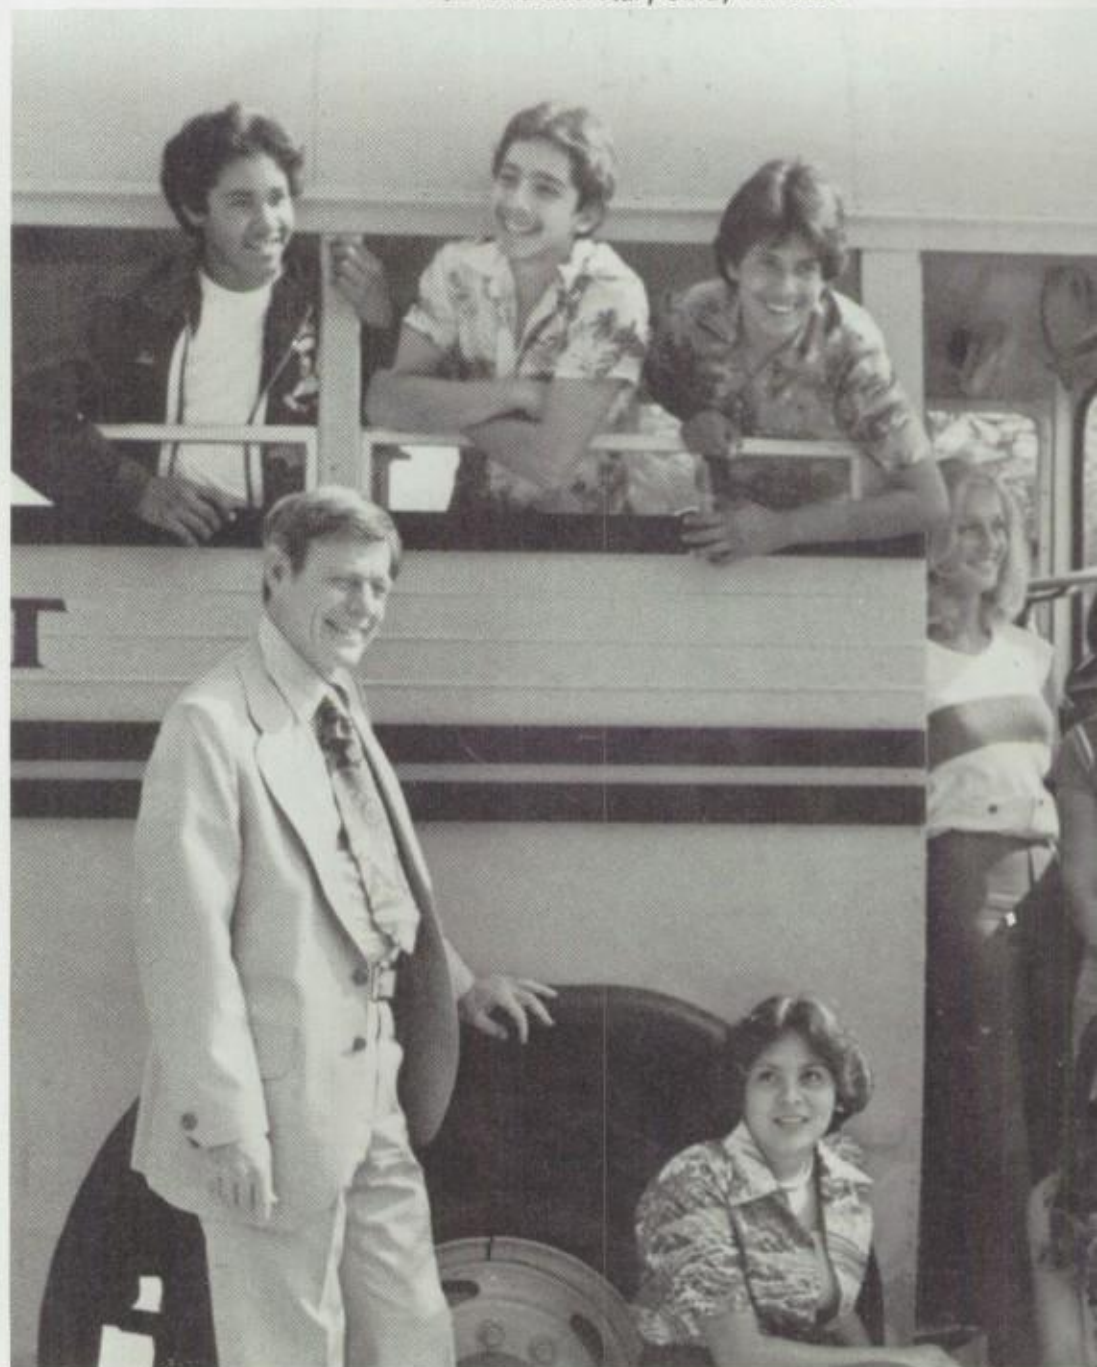

Freshman elections got off to a running start this year, beginning with the nominations of Carol Garcia and Liz Renteria competing for the office of president. Carol Garcia was announced the victor after one of the closest counts in Schurr's election history. Sandy Barajas and Cindy Terrazas also got things going when elected vice president and secretary respectively.

As all the candidates were new to Schurr, their campaign posters were a major factor in making themselves known.

Throughout the year the officers and cabinet spent active weekends thinking of new and original ideas to get the entire freshman class involved, and organizing the sale of class t-shirts, "Curly-Q" suckers and hot chocolate.

Getting off to a rolling start this year were President Barajas and Secretary Cindy Terrazas

A rare moment indeed for Pat Cerceres when the locker area is not filled with bustling students

Nutrition time studies give Blake Wolken a reprieve for completing his Spanish homework

It's Only the Beginning

September 12th was a full day for incoming freshmen. With a Pee Chee in one hand and a class schedule in the other, new Spartans eagerly searched for their designated classes. Although the first sight of three-story "C" building awed some students, this attitude quickly changed to dismay when it was discovered that science and health classes were on the uppermost floor. Unconditioned legs searching for classrooms soon felt the ache of muscle strain from the constant climbing of stairs. With so many folders and books to carry after leaving each classroom, arms began to feel the heavy load too. Although locker areas were crowded, squeezing through the crowd became worthwhile, because they were the relief stations for book burdened arms.

But new classes meant new teachers and students, and this became an opportunity to meet new friends. After a bit of initial chattering, teachers quickly passed out books and assignments. Getting their first taste of high school homework, freshmen found it quite a change from their junior high school years.

Midway through the exhausting first day, weary minds deserved a rest, so lunch was gratefully welcomed. And even here learning took place; as the lunch lines grew longer each second, freshmen quickly learned the rewards of promptness.

Where the Singles Hang Out

Something new caught the eye of freshmen this year — the student lounge. They found that it provided a comfortable place to relax and listen to their favorite sounds, to catch up on the latest scam from friends, or to do last minute homework.

On those cold, gloomy days the youngest of the Schurr crowd discovered another use for the lounge: it was a warm, sheltered place to cluster and keep away from the chilly weather — not to mention work-oriented teachers.

In fact, freshmen, reluctant to leave the music of the juke box for the quiet classrooms, often had to be escorted out. Opinions rarely differed on the subject of the student lounge. Most felt that it was a good idea; one enthusiastic freshman said it all with "I go in all the time — I can't afford to put dimes in, but when others do, I listen."

Studying for a test is best done in the student lounge. Pat Snyder and Danny Espinosa attest to

You've Come a Long Way, Baby

Having taken a giant step from junior high school to high school, freshmen entered a new realm where maturity and responsibility were expected of them. By fulfilling these expectations, freshmen found they were given many freedoms. Choosing their own classes was one. Though it might have seemed a complicated procedure for the neophytes, many students liked the idea of being able to select their own classes. Receiving letter grades for the first time also had a great effect on freshmen. "Because of letter grades you study more," replied a student. Less confinement also meant open-campus lunch, and students enjoyed having access to other eating places.

Academics Takes a Back Seat to Activities

Freshmen found endless opportunities to take part in school activities. As a starter, the September "Icebreaker Dance" provided freshmen the chance to get to meet each other. Commented one freshman, "It was nice having a live band and I met different friends." For the vivacious night-goer, the setting of football games provided the perfect hangout. Revved up by the band and cheerleaders, students got involved in chants and cheers in true Spartan spirit. Musically inclined freshmen took up band or choir to display their talents, while qualifying athletes competed for positions waiting to be filled on teams. Other extracurricular activities offered were various club and organization memberships. Considering the wide selection of activities, a member of the class of '81 remarked about Schurr, "It's not all learning."

Habla Español? Hector Gonzales' question-answer

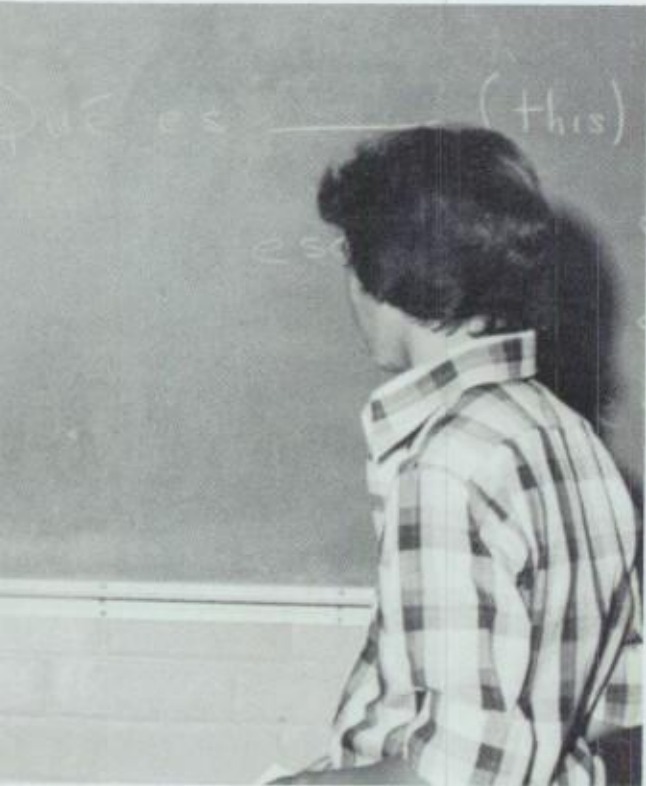

Friendly persuasion by Mr. Woodrome encourages ment among students of the minimum proficiency importance

As though struck by lightening, freshmen were stunned after hearing that they were the first graduating class to be affected by the state-mandated Hart Bill which goes into effect June, 1980. The bill clearly states that students must pass a minimum proficiency exam in order to graduate. According to Mr. Raisner who heads the subcommittee to design the Hart Law, it is going to be difficult to define what minimum proficiency is since each district will be making its own exam. All that is known about the exam is that it will cover comprehension, computation, and writing. Students who are unable to make a passing score must retake the exam as many times as necessary, or until they are 18 years old, in order to graduate. However, remedial help will be provided for the students not passing. In addition to the proficiency exam, the Hart Bill will require students to obtain more credits in order to graduate. One student cheerfully commented, "I think it's a good idea because it's challenging. It'll probably benefit us in the future."

Students with "Class of '81" ribbons were a familiar sight during spirit week — a week filled with camaraderie and crazy activities. The freshman class was honored Monday at a special pep rally where events such as pogo-stick races, baby-bottle drinking, and marshmallow-eating contests took place. Also during this zany week a Sammy and Sandy Spartan were chosen; winning the freshmen class honors were Joey Jordan and Cindy Terrazas.

But the highlight of the week was Friday — a day that began bright and early for spirited freshmen who found decorating "C" building a new and exciting experience. As the freshmen worked throughout the morning draping brightly colored banners and streamers, they seemed impervious to the chilly, early morning air. But they really warmed up at the spirit day carnival following classes, when the frosh cabinet hustled hot buttered popcorn which they carried around campus on cigarette trays. The cabinet also sponsored a dime-toss booth where steady-nerved dime pitchers were awarded delicious suckers.

As the freshmen worked together coordinating booths, decorating "C" building, and cheering at the jug yell, they began to feel united. One freshman eagerly commented, "Spirit day was a good experience because you all get together and let out your feelings."

To Letty!! meeting you was weird Letty but it was fun. Too bad
we couldn't get together sooner and get high together a little more often. And you better stop getting weaded like that cause I wouldn't like to see you die!!

From deep down of my heart
Thank you for the love, care that you all have for me.
In the past years, I learn lot of thing & meet others. I have been in love & lost some one who I love the most. Time does not make any different.
Hope is what I always will have. In the future I pray I will be with him again forever.
(Y...) Thank you for your love.
the time that we share together mean so much to me.
I love you. (mouth Jr.) Hey you are the one who put the smile on my face. Thank you. love ya. (ear...) You are a sweet person. Keep your mouth moving & you will make other happy. (Keron...) The time we are together seen like yesterday.
Hey. I love you all.
Our spirit will be together
forever. Be Cool Anna

good times that you gave me. no
one has made me feel as happy as you made me feel. I wish I could have done something in return to make you as happy as you made me.
This was a good year and I'm glad you were there. I hope someday I'll get to see you again, after I leave. That means you better come and visit me. Take care and I will always remember you.

What made learning so enjoyable for the Class of 78 was variety of personable and charismatic seniors that one invariably came in contact with. In turn, teachers became more friendly and opened up to seniors ideas and interests. Though this comradery took almost three years to develop, it flourished for seniors during 1977 and 1978."

Perhaps the most difficult task facing us in September was the creating of this year's theme. Relating to every person at Schurr, we focused on "Join the Crowd," capturing as many modes as we possibly could. Excitedly, we developed this theme in a child's view through artwork and childlike sayings.

Producing the 304 pages was another story. Tension built in all of us at deadline time and headaches were frequent especially on all those long Saturdays. But the devotion, pride and eagerness in us surpassed all our miseries as each page was marked COMPLETE.

Special thanks from me go to my 18 staff members who succeeded in bringing to you Spectrum '78. Thanks Scott, sports editor, Gary, Jeff for devising the greatest sport section ever; Leigh, activities and assistant editors, Barbara, Laura whose ideas will last forever; Georgina, clubs editor, Veronica whose smiles made each day better; Lynne, faculty editor (thanks for your help on theme), Lorri, whose section is fantastic; Eric, senior editor, Karen who pulled through the hassels; Dana, class editor, Lynne who were so efficient; Suzette, advertising designer who worked hard with Lynne and Eric in ad making. Thanks also to Sandy, Vickie and Lucia. Special thanks go to artists Jean Simes and Eddie Norriega. Thanks Mr. DeLange and Gene. My most gratifying thanks go to our advisor and friend Mrs. C. whose perfection, guidance and humor helped us achieve our goal. Good-bye and good luck.
